WOMAN ENDS LIFE WITH DRUG

Mrs. Emma Yule, wife of a traveling salesman, who has been away on a long tour, committed suicide in her lodging house, No. 98½ Main street, Charlestown, for some mysterious reason which the police are trying to determine. Her body was found this afternoon. She had taken laudanum.

Her body was found by Sarah E. Flock. She had heard Mrs. Yule threaten to commit suicide several times before. The woman had drank the poison some time between 9 o'clock last night and this afternoon.

BINGHAM DECLINES NOMINATION.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 2.—Judge George H. Bingham to-day declined to accept the Democratic nomination for Governor.

RESULTS OF AQUEDUCT RACES.

1st—Delirium, Live Wire, Schleswig.
2d—Animus, Rockstone, Saracinesca.

ROCK ISLAND FEATURE OF MARKET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Rock Island stock and bonds were the strong features in a dull but firm stock market during the first half hour of trading to-day. The four per cent. bonds advanced 2 points, while the 5's rose 1½ points. Although trading in the preferred stock was not excited, it rose nearly one point.

DEMOCRATS HOPE TO CARRY WEST VIRGINIA.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 2.—A canvass poll of the State was completed last evening by the Democratic State Executive Committee. The committee claims that it indicates election of Democratic ticket and that Bryan will carry the State.

O'MARA CAMBRIDGE YOUNGSTER WINS MARATHON

Vast Throng at Brockton Fair Cheers Lad Who Headed 42 Runners in Long Run From Boston.

BROCKTON, Oct. 2.—James W. O'Mara, a young runner from Cambridge, won the Marathon race from Boston to-day, before the biggest "last day" crowd in the history of the Brockton Fair. O'Mara covered the twenty-three miles from the B. A. A. clubhouse in Exeter street to the judges' stand on the fair grounds half-mile track in 2 hours 35 minutes and 24 2-5 seconds.

Edward G. Ryder of the Oakdale A. C. was second (2:37:23 2-5), and Charles Henry of Lynn, who led the runners out of Boston and through Mattapan Square, third, in 2 hours 38 minutes 43 4-5 seconds.

The next three men, Mellor, Hayden and Appleyard, all wore the colors of the Mercury Athletic Club of Yonkers, N. Y. Mellor, because of his long experience in distance running, having won the B. A. A. Ashland-Boston Marathon as long ago as 1902, had been picked by many to carry off first prize.

Winner a Dark Horse.

Forty-three out of fifty-eight entrants made their appearance in Exeter street at 10 o'clock and were sent away by George V. Brown, athletic manager of the Boston Athletic Association. Henry of Lynn took the lead at the pistol shot and held it for practically half the course. Nobody made any effort to head him off at the start, and the run through Huntington avenue to Massachusetts avenue and along Columbia road to Blue Hill avenue and Mattapan square was a pleasant jaunt.

Fred J. Keane of Rockland, fifty years old, attracted quite as much attention as any of his fleet-footed young competitors. When Keane dashed through Mattapan square at 11 o'clock, twenty minutes behind Henry of Lynn, he got the ovation of the day. For many miles the men were trailed by bicyclists, some of whom lasted the entire route.

O'Mara, the winner, was a dark horse. None of the veteran followers of Marathons had mentioned the Cambridge lad as a possible victor. It was another case of the rank outsider, an experience not entirely unknown to the followers of racing. O'Mara took his honors blushingly.

Far Stretched Out.

One minute after noon and two hours after the start, thirty-one of the thirty-five runners who were then in the race had gone along through Central square in Randolph. Here, as elsewhere along the twenty-three-mile course, there was great enthusiasm. The last ten men in the race were just about walking at this stage of the contest. Some of them appeared to be all in but determined to make the course.

Jim O'Mara sailed through Randolph square as early as 11:31. Randolph didn't know him to be O'Mara, but Randolph was ready and willing to wager something at that moment that "No. 37" was going to win the Brockton Marathon, and "No. 37" did win it. "No. 37" was the Cambridge lad identified, like all the others, by the number on his back. Ryder of Oakdale was just behind O'Mara here, as he was at the finish on the fair grounds.

Here are the feats of the first ten men:

Contestant.	Time. h. m. s.
1—James W. O'Mara, No. Cambridge	2:35:24 4-5

Sammy Mellor and Charles Henry went through Randolph almost together. It was remarked in Randolph at the time that both seemed weak, and the Lynn man especially so. Henry must have known what he was about, however, for he was still in third place at the finish.

Immediately on the conclusion of the event at Brockton the afternoon programme of horse racing was begun.

Umpires—Klein and Johnstone.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—The Giants welcomed one game to-day as a drowning man would welcome a life preserver. They never could have survived a double-header. All the lame and the halt of the baseball profession seem to be numbered among the New York team. Bresnahan ought to be on crutches, but he wants to go behind the bat. Tenney's legs ought to be in splints, but he gamely sticks it out. Devlin ought to have a new pair of underpinnings, but he hasn't time to go to the surgeons.

As a matter of dope the Giants are all in, but as a matter of fact they are hanging on to the lead like a mud turtle. They are just fighting on nerve and it will be a wonder if they do not collapse once the season ends.

Manager McGraw announced that he would probably send Ames to the box. This young man has pitched two excellent games recently and seems to have acquired a confidence that he once lacked. The Phillies had plenty of good pitchers on hand and were not worried like McGraw in choosing a box artist. The weather was cool and clear.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—Clear but cool weather was on tap for the second game of the series between the Athletics and Red Sox this afternoon. The sun shone strongly, but there was that nip in the air which foretells the end of the baseball season. In fact the temperature was cool enough to make Manager Lake doubtful about his battery selection this afternoon. "This cold weather does not make us feel like playing," he said. "But the season will be over soon and then we can take a rest."

Connie Mack was equally undecided as to his battery.

The crowd was small, nearly all the fans going over to the National League grounds to see the Giants-Phillies game.

WASHINGTON PARK, Brooklyn, Oct. 2.—The Doves and the Superbas got away in their second clash of the last series this afternoon with the Kellyites anxious to make good for losing that ninth inning conflict of yesterday, and started off at a lively clip, leaving no doubt that they were out for business just to give an inkling what they would do to the Giants when they tackle them next week.

All the eyes of Manhattan were on the Doves trying to dope out what their chances were of spoiling the Giants pennant hopes, and the games with the Superbas were the best to get a line on the Boston bunch just before the important series came off.

The Doves were ready to put up another stiff fight, which almost copped the coin in the game yesterday, while the Superbas tried hard to hand out the same treatment which they got in the Hub when the Doves put over two lickings out of three games.

As baseball interest had lagged some except where the pennant teams were playing, there was not much inspiration for the players, judging from the size of the gallery, but the few got their money's worth seeing two evenly matched teams battle as if the result decided the flag.

QUIZ CITY MEN ON COLLECTIONS

"Did you contribute any money to the campaign of any mayoralty candidate in 1905 or 1907?"

Michael J. Sughrue, counsel for the Finance Commission, asked this question to-day of a dozen employes in the city treasurer's and city collector's departments. Their answers are being kept secret by Mr. Sughrue.

Agents for the Finance Commission are investigating the library department. The charge that favoritism has been shown in the appointment and promotion of library attaches has been made.

NO CONTEST ON RAWSON WILL

The will of Warren W. Rawson of Arlington was to-day allowed by Judge George F. Lawton in the Middlesex County Probate court at East Cambridge. For a time after the filing of the will, in which an estate valued at $500,000 was bequeathed, it was expected that four grandchildren of the deceased would make a contest. Under the provisions of the will they were each left the income of $5,000, the whole to be paid to them when they reached the age of twenty-one.

To-day James A. Bailey, Jr., attorney for the grandchildren, announced that all objection was withdrawn and the will was allowed without compromise.

GRADY SPENT $100 IN CAMPAIGN

Thomas J. Grady spent $100 in his campaign for renomination for the House of Representatives in Ward 6, according to sworn returns filed to-day. The money was paid to J. V. Donnaruma. Freeman O. Emerson, candidate for the House in Ward 12, spent $59.

MAYOR TO ADDRESS BROKERS IN NEW YORK

Mayor Hibbard will go next Monday night to New York, where he will address a gathering of real estate brokers on Wednesday. He will also visit Philadelphia next week. He will attend a municipal convention at Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 17 and 18.

JORDAN HAS BIG APPETITE

The appetite of Chester S. Jordan, confined in the East Cambridge jail on the charge of wife-murder, astonishes prison officials. For dinner to-day he ate two boiled potatoes, a large portion of baked stuffed haddock, two dishes of stewed tomatoes, a dish of peas, four slices of bread, a big piece of a pie served with cheese, a plate of ice cream and five cup cakes. He drank a cup of coffee.

PEARY OFF ON LAST LEG OF SAIL TO POLE

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Oct. 2.—Having safely transferred a large supply of stores to the Peary Arctic steamer Roosevelt at Etah, West Greenland, the auxiliary steamer Erik arrived back at this port to-day. The Roosevelt, which will go to Columbia, where a dash will be made across the ice, has on board three Americans besides Commander Peary, the regular crew of the steamer, thirty-five Eskimos and 350 dogs.

FIND SKELETON IN CHELSEA CELLAR

The skeleton, minus the skull, of an adult person was unearthed in the work of excavating for the foundation of the new Shurtleff school on Shurtleff street, Hawthorne street and Congress avenue, Chelsea. It was found under a huge stone weighing a ton and a half in the basement of a double house on Shurtleff street.

CANVASS SHOWS 699 FROTHINGHAM VOTES

Louis A. Frothingham will go into the State Republican convention to-morrow with 699 votes, within seventy-seven votes of enough to insure his nomination for Lieutenant-Governor.

These figures are the result of a canvass made by the BOSTON AMERICAN in 306 towns and 32 cities. This showed that the three candidates were sure of the following number of delegates:

Frothingham	653
Luce	301
Cole	407

(Doubtful 112)

The AMERICAN then obtained official statements from the managers of the three rival campaigns, for the one city and the twenty-seven towns missing. These are the figures on which the three campaign managers agree:

Frothingham	46
Luce	12
Cole	5

(Still in doubt, 14.)

By adding the forty-six delegates from the missing districts to the 653 known to be with Frothingham, he will have 699.

Adding the figures in the missing towns to those obtained in the AMERICAN'S canvass, the three candidates will line up as follows in the convention:

Frothingham	699
Cole	412
Luce	313
Doubtful	126

1,400 LASTERS OUT IN BIG LYNN SHOE STRIKE

Fifty-two shoe factories were affected in Lynn this afternoon when 1,400 hand and machine lasters inaugurated their threatened strike by failing to return to their places at 1 o'clock.

The fifty-two factories have shoes in stock sufficient to keep working for two or three days, and then if terms cannot be made with the lasters the plants will be obliged to close unless the places of the strikers are filled.

A gigantic mass meeting is being held now in Lasters' Union headquarters in Andrews street. President James F. Etter of the Lasting Machine Operators' Union and President John Wells of the Lasters' Union are presiding.

Plans for the conduct of the strike are being made and resolutions framed.

Strike of Magnitude.

The strike is of far greater magnitude than was at first thought. The strikers have the sympathy of the townspeople of Lynn and if one or two other unions join them in sympathy strikes as is rumored to be quite possible, the consequence to the fifty-two mills would be serious. The Edge Workers' Union, for instance, could almost immediately tie up the work in the factories should it join in the fight.

A repetition of the big Knights of Labor strike of five years ago when violence was an every-day occurrence for some time and when blood was shed is to-day feared in Lynn.

Backed by Knights of Labor.

The lasters are not affiliated with the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union, and the Knights of Labor, who are at odds with the Boot & Shoe Workers' and have been ever since the great strike of five years ago, are lining up with the lasters and promising them aid.

Insist on Union Rates.

The lasters struck because, they say, a number of new assembling machines installed in the factory of the Joseph Caunt Company are operated by girls who are paid less than the union rate called for in the contract between the factory management and the lasters. This contract will be in force until October 17. The strikers say that the shoe company broke the contract. No objection is made by the strikers to girls operating the machines. But the lasters insist they must be paid as men would have to be under the contract with the Caunt company.

M. J. Tracy, C. O. Whidden and Elmer S. Robinson, a committee representing the independent lasters, had a conference with the Board of Directors of the Lynn Shoe Manufacturers' Association yesterday and stated their grievance. The directors replied that it was a case over which they had no jurisdiction.

Secretary H. W. Sawyer of the association said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day: "We cannot adjust matters in this case. It is wholly outside of our jurisdiction. If the strike goes on it will be an injustice to all the shoeworkers in Lynn. It is an individual affair between lasters and the Caunt concern."

Important Labor Session.

The independent lasters held one of the most important labor meetings ever known in Lynn last evening. There were about 1,000 present. They heard the committee report and unanimously voted to strike. To the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day Business Agent Tracy said:

"This will be a fight to the finish. A strike was our last resort. We have tried every way to have a peaceful settlement. Our contract with the Caunt concern has been violated by it. We do not object to the new machines nor to girl operators. But our contract stated that lasters were to be paid a certain price for their work. These girls are not being paid that price. That is our grievance."

The strike has caused a commotion in labor circles in Lynn, and every business interest in the city is deeply interested in it. Groups of men gathered on street corners early to-day to discuss it. It is feared that there will be serious trouble if strike breakers are brought here from other places.

The Caunt company claims that it has not violated the contract with the lasters, but has changed its system independent of the agreement.

Affected by Strike.

The other concerns affected by the strike are: James Phelan & Son, Thomas & Co., A. E. Little, P. J. Harney, Harney Brothers, P. J. K. Kiley, Cotter Shoe Company, Welch & Landigran, Walton & Logan, Edward Logan, George H. Daniels & Company, Miller & Hapgood, Randall Adams, J. S. Walker, B. K. & A. H. Jones, Eagle Shoe Company, Hennessy & Thompson, Hoag & Walden, A. Foster & Son, A. Smith & Co., Albert Creighton, Allen & Foster, Thomas Cochran, Alley Shoe Company, Winship & Williams, Tufts & Freidman, William Porter & Company, William Currier, Ricker & Gregory, Cozy Shoe Company, L. S. Johnson, Leonard Shoe Company, Founce & Spinney, J. H. Cross, Watson Shoe Company and several others.

Of all the shops in the city that of the Joseph Caunt Company, where the trouble was precipitated, is not affected.

This afternoon the Caunt shop is running as usual, while all others in the city are seriously crippled by the absence of the lasters.

FINED $300 FOR HORSE SWINDLE

James A. Campbell, proprietor of the Bunker Hill Sales and Commission Stables, Charlestown, was to-day fined $300 by Judge Dodge in the United States Circuit Court for using the United States mail to further a horse swindle. Campbell was arrested by the federal authorities some time ago with Cornelius P. Shea, former international president of the Teamsters' Union, on the charge of using the mails to defraud. Shea was released.

The government alleged that Campbell sold broken-down horses to farmers in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont by means of advertisements in which he pictured the horses as first-class animals.

CRUSHED BY SLABS IN MARBLE FACTORY

William R. Moran, sixty-five years old, of Lauriat avenue, Dorchester died on his way to the City Hospital to-day as the result of being crushed beneath a pile of marble slabs which fell upon him at the marble factory of Bowker, Torrey & Co. in South Boston.

DARRIN TAKES HAINS CASE FROM GRAND JURY

ABSENCE OF WITNESSES DELAYS PRESENTATION OF EVIDENCE AGAINST JENKINS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—District Attorney Ira G. Darrin withdrew the case against T. Jenkins Hains, charged with being accessory to the murder of William E. Annis, from the Queen's County Grand Jury to-day. Two important witnesses were prevented by illness from appearing to testify, and Mr. Darrin decided to allow the matter to go over until Monday, when he will present it to the October Grand Jury.

The cases against T. Jenkins Hains and his brother, Captain Peter Conover Hains, will be presented and tried separately. One of the witnesses who could not appear today was Mrs. William E. Annis, widow of the murdered man.

Other witnesses whom the prosecution was ready to produce during the morning were Louis C. Harway, the companion of Annis in his catboat on August 16 when he was killed, and several members of the yacht club who saw the shooting.

But it is chiefly upon the testimony of Mrs. Annis that T. Jenkins Hains is expected to be indicted. She was sitting on the piazza of the yacht club on the day that the Hains brothers appeared and pretended to be investigating a proposed purchase of real estate.

Warned Husband in Vain.

She saw her husband's little catboat approaching the club's float, running free before the wind with Annis and Harway sitting in the stern. Then she saw the Hains brothers. She knew them. She suspected that they were looking for Annis. Running down toward the float the agonized woman tried to warn her husband.

"Will, don't come in. Don't come in," she cried. But Annis did not hear or would not heed her warning. Peter Hains walked down to the float followed by his brother.

The little catboat was luffed up into the wind with the sail hanging out over the float, so that Annis was unable to see the Hains brothers.

Mrs. Annis made one last desperate effort to save her husband. She ran toward Captain Hains, but it was too late. As he fired at Annis she still tried to interfere, and then, according to her story, T. Jenkins Hains turned with a revolver, covering her as well as the yachtsmen who had run forward, and said: "Keep out of this; it is our affair. I will shoot down anyone who tries to interfere."

Mrs. Annis, in her statement to the District Attorney yesterday, told her story of the shooting as she saw it.

Threatened to Kill Her.

"I would have gone to the aid of my husband if it had been possible," said she. "No one will ever know my feelings. The first thing Jenkins Hains did was to grab me by the arm and turn me around and put a pistol to my back and tell me if I made a move he would kill me.

"I was forced to stand there and listen to the shots that killed my husband, knowing that a move meant death to me, and that my babies were being robbed of their father and me of my husband. I was paralyzed with fear, but I would have gone to him had it not been for Jenkins Hains holding me as he did with his pistol ready to kill me.

"My husband and I were absolutely as happy as we could be," said Mrs. Annis when questioned about her domestic life. "Mr. Annis was guiltless of the charges made by the Hains brothers. That I am confident of. When not at work he was with me. Why, he used to call me up when he dined with men friends, and after dinner I would meet him and we would go to a theatre. I always knew where he was. His afternoons off were spent with me and the children.

"As for Mrs. Hains, there is not one word of truth in the stories told. She is a good woman and was a good and true wife. I will go on the stand and testify in her behalf."

LEAKS CLOSED IN YANKEE BY CEMENT DAMS

Water Will Be Pumped Out and Cruiser Floated Sunday, with Good Weather.

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 2.—The fate of the converted cruiser Yankee, ashore on Spindle Rocks in Buzzard's Bay, depends entirely upon the weather. Should the wind veer around and blow from a different quarter, causing the sea to pound the vessel again as it was last Tuesday, no power could save her.

The work of building the internal coffer-dam in her hold, over the great holes torn in her hull as she drove full speed on the rocks, was completed to-day. Twenty-four hours must elapse before the cement will have hardened sufficiently to allow the pumping out of her hold.

Eight duplex pumps of eight and ten-inch diameter will to-morrow afternoon begin to throw water out of the vessel at the rate of 25,000 gallons a minute. It is thought that by Sunday noon she will have been pumped dry and will have risen from the rocky crade sufficiently for the eight strong colliers, tugs and lighters at her side to draw her from the rocks, provided the sea stays smooth.

tI is proposed then to take the Yankee to New Bedford where she will be examined, and then to the Brooklyn navy yard for repairs.

The vessel is badly strained. The pounding she got in last Tuesday's storm wrenched her frame and sprung plates in her hold. She has been stripped until she is but a skeleton. Even the pig iron ballast she took on when she was launched in 1892 was removed to-day and now nothing but the engines remain in the vessel. They are far under water and cannot be reached.

Should the engineers be able to save the vessel it will be regarded as one of the most remarkable naval feats ever accomplished. Never in the history of the navy has so large a vessel remained whole so long on the rocks.

B. & M. AGAIN BARS PARCELS OF DAY EXPRESS

Manager McCarthy Attacks Officials in Speech From Car Platform.

There was an exciting episode at the North station to-day when Charles J. McCarthy, treasurer and manager of the Day Express Company, one of the oldest in existence, made a speech from a car step on track 9 to about 150 passengers and denounced the American Express Company and the Boston & Maine road for what he claims is an attempt to force his concern to the wall because it charges lower rates to the public than its big rival.

The minimum rate of the Day Company is fifteen cents for ten pounds. The American Express, he claims, gets forty and charges besides for return cartage. He found the express car barred to his goods, he says, and had to put his packages in the smoking car. In a statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN, Mr. McCarthy said to-day:

"I claim that at the instigation of the American Express Company the Boston & Maine railroad to-day undertook to bar the Day Express Company from transportation privileges which are its legal and business right. To-day the Boston & Maine ordered Mr. Sturtevant, the weigher, not to weigh our express goods for the 8:45 train. I immediately started for the train, and found on arrival at Track 9 that the baggage car had ben put at the end of the train and all doors securely fastened. Two men had also been stationed on each step to keep me from entering. There were 100 railroad employes ready to take forceful action, if necessary, to prevent our goods being put in the car. These men were under the orders of A. C. Robinson, assistant passenger ticket agent. We took our goods and piled them up in the smoking car and dared the railroad employes to touch them. Our goods arrived safely at their destinations at the usual time to-day. The American Express Company is trying to prevent our forwarding goods on morning trains. We ship over the Boston & Maine to many places in Massachusetts and to others in New Hampshire.

"What went on around the baggage car attracted a great deal of attention, and passengers piled out of cars to learn what was going on. So I stood on a car step and explained what the Boston & Maine was trying to do at the instigation of the American Express Company."

LOWEST BIDS GET CONTRACTS FOR SUPPLIES

—SUPT. W. F. BURK.

"Mayor Hibbard has not ordered or suggested that I buy supplies from any concerns other than lowest bidders."—Superintendent of Supplies Walter F. Burk.

Superintendent Burk to-day nailed the story that he purchased oil and other supplies from the Chicago Rawhide Manufacturing Company at Mayor Hibbard's order or suggestion. Councilman Goodwin of Ward 1, East Boston, last night presented an order in the Common Council, calling for a statement of prices paid this company for supplies. He charged that L. E. Tracy, manager of the concern, is Mayor Hibbard's intimate friend.

Bills on file at the supply department and in the city auditor's office show that the city pays this year from 28 to 32 cents per gallon for cylinder oil of different grades as against 65 cents last year. For "bearings" oil the price this year is 18 cents per gallon for the ferry department supply and 20 cents per gallon for a better grade used at the pumping station. The cost last year was 35 cents per gallon.

"I purchase from the Chicago Rawhide Manufacturing Company because it is the lowest bidder," Superintendent Burke said to-day. "Mayor Hibbard's only order to me concerning purchases was to buy from lowest bidders. He has not ordered or suggested that I buy supplies from any concern other than lowest bidders."

BOARD SCORES HIGH RATES OF EXPRESS TRUST

The Massachusetts Railroad Commission has decided that the express rates charged by the American and National companies for transporting goods within a radius of fifty miles of Boston are "excessive and unreasonable."

This decision is the result of the fight made against the American and National express companies by the Boston Merchants' Association and other petitioners. The commissioners' attention was called to the fact that the companies recently raised their minimum rate from fifteen to twenty-five cents. The commission's report states that the American holds a controlling interest in the National Company, and employs it as its agent, and that within twenty-five years the two companies have gobbled up the business of about twenty corporations, firms or persons in this State. The American's biggest competitor is the Adams Express Company, and the trustees of the latter own the New York & Boston Dispatch Express Company. The commission says:

"This section of the country, the first in which the express business was established, has been the last in which the larger express companies have gained a virtual monopoly."

It is stated by the commission that there are 3,000,000 people living within a radius of fifty miles of Boston, and says: "Here, if anywhere, express charges should be at minimum rates."

FIN. COM. TO REPORT ON DORCHESTER YARD

The Finance Commission to-day met in executive session and continued the drafting of a report on the Dorchester yard of the paving division. The report will be issued within a few days. SHELDON TIED TO SEVENTEEN TRUSTS--MACK

Democratic Chairman Gives List in Case of Republican Treasurer.

HE ATTACKS HIS RECORD

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, issued a statement to-day in which he gave a list of trusts with which he says George R. Sheldon, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, has been connected for the last ten years. His statement is as follows:

"These corporation affiliations of George R. Sheldon for the past ten years make interesting reading, in view of the recent developments.

"I wish to recall that Governor Odell in 1902 refused to permit the party leaders to put Sheldon in nomination for his connections. Odell decided at that time that he would not accept a renomination if Sheldon were named as his running mate. But while the Republican party has refused to put up Mr. Sheldon's name for a public office, it has for the identical reasons of this refusal elected him for its campaign fund collector, which cannot be denied.

"Most of the corporations with which Mr. Sheldon is identified are capitalized in the millions. How much of their stock is of the liquid variety can be easily ascertained, yet Mr. Roosevelt has accepted him, and his resignation was not demanded when Mr. Dupont was invited to step down. Mr. Dupont was identified with one trust, while Mr. Sheldon is at the present time identified with no less than seventeen prominent financial concerns. One of these, the Bethlehem Steel Company, does not employ union labor and has opposed the organization of its employes for the past sixteen years."

The corporations that Mr. Sheldon is now connected with, according to Mr. Mack, are as follows:

American Locomotive Company, Bethlehem Steel Company, Cincinnati Northern Railway Company, Detroit Edison Company, Electrical Security Company, Laclede Gas Company, Montreal Locomotive Works, Locomotive Securities Company, Metropolitan Trust Company, Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light Company, Milwaukee Light, Heat & Transit Company, National Copper Company, North American Company, New Jersey Terminal Stock & Improvement Company, Republic Iron & Steel Company, Rogers Locomotive Works, St. Louis Transit Company.

BIG FLEET ANCHORS ON DEWEY BATTLE SCENE

BATTLESHIPS ESCORTED UP MANILA BAY BY CHEERING ISLANDERS.

MANILA, Oct. 2.—The Atlantic battleship fleet steamed slowly into Manila Bay this afternoon and, sailing majestically across the battlefield where Dewey and his men fought their historic fight with the Spanish fleet ten years ago, dropped anchor off the city.

The fleet cleared the south channel shortly after noon and steamed up the centre of the bay, while dozens of launches and steamers sailing along besides the monsters of the navy sounded a discordant welcome with whistles, cheers and every other noise-making device that could be contrived.

As the Connecticut led the line past Corregidor the garrison there fired the admiral's salute. The passage of the channel was made in a single column, but as soon as the last ship in the long line was safely through, signals were hoisted for the double column formation, and in this manner the ships steamed up the bay two abreast.

As the ships anchored, General Weston, military commander in this city, sent a wireless message conveying the greetings of himself, his officers and the men of the army to Admiral Sperry and his men. Admiral Sperry replied, thanking him for his kind welcome.

Governor-General Smith witnessed the arrival of the fleet from his launch.

Preparations for the reception of the officers and men are far beyond anything ever before attempted and the illuminations and decorations are on a lavish scale. Arches, one for each ship of the fleet, span the principal thoroughfares. There are thousands of electric bulbs and miles of extra wiring blaze in letters of fire the city's "Welcome." The Luneta is a mass of electric lights visible at Corregidor.

The cholera has thrown a damper on everything, especially commerce. The action of the navy department in denying the right to land, however just, is regarded here as the greatest blow that has befallen insular commerce. Business men are amazed at such action, in view of the fact that there is no epidemic now. Also, they say, the fleet goes to Shanghai, Yokohama and Amoy, and has been to Rio Janeiro, each of which show more infectious and deadly diseases in a year than found in Manila when the cholera was at the worst.

The health department is confident the disease is under control. It is declared the publication of the action of the navy throughout the world is bound to have a disastrous effect on Philippine commerce for years to come.

WHOLE FORCE FIRED BY WIRE

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 2.—The entire federal immigration force at this port was dismissed peremptorily from service by message from Washington. The men discharged are Emil Engelcke, chief of the local bureau; Inspectors John Canfield and Harry Manning, Chinese Interpreter Lee. Action of the government is the result of investigation made by Professor Jencks Cornell, professor at Sanford, into the alleged connivance of the immigration service in smuggling Chinese into this country without papers. Engelcke asserts innocence, but will not fight the order of dismissal.

HOLD WATCHMAN FOR MAIL THEFT

John F. Crimmins, for the past fourteen months night watchman at the Brockton postoffice, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes in the Federal building to-day on the charge of larceny from the mails. He was taken to the Charles Street Jail in default of $1,500 bail to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury.

NEW PARTY OPENS IN N. H.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 2.—Before an enthusiastic audience in G. A. R. Hall last evening, George W. Rief, Walter H. Lewis and Major J. Alonzo Greene, the Independence party nominees for Mayor of Manchester, Governor and Congressman for the first district, respectively, denounced in scathing terms the evils that have been fostered in State and nation under the old parties. It was the opening rally in a series which will continue each week-day night until the election in the principal cities and towns of the State.

IDENTIFY ONE OF 8 YEGG SUSPECTS

Of the eight suspects arrested yesterday at the Brockton Fair and held under suspicion as members of the band of yeggs who broke into the Plymouth and Brockton postoffices recently, one was to-day identified by Postoffice Inspector Jennings as Michael Hartnett, alias Lawrence Mickey, an alleged notorious yegg. The other seven men are being held until their records can be investigated.

FOUR VERMONT SLAYERS GET LIFE TERMS

Believed That There Will Be No More Hangings—Priest Yet to Be Freed.

Special to the Boston American.

RUTLAND, Vt., Oct. 2.—Vincenzo Gioia, accused of murder in the first degree in the killing of Accarito Santoro on July 22 last, in which the Rev. Father Francis Crociata is charged with being an accessory after the fact, to-day changed his plea of not guilty of murder in the first degree to guilty of murder in the second degree.

Along with Vito Turcianna, who was tried yesterday as the other principal in the killing and who was found guilty of second degree murder, Gioia was sentenced to life imprisonment in State prison at Windsor.

Andrea Fusco then pleaded guilty to second degree murder in the killing of Antonio Fusco, his cousin, at West Rutland, on May 31. His plea was accepted by the State, and he, too, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Three first degree murder cases, along with that of Antonio Vallento, who pleaded guilty in the second degree for the killing of Sheriff F. A. Hayden of Budlow, bear out the prediction that there will be no more hangings for murder in Vermont.

In view of the fact that the evidence given against Turcianna is conceded by the prosecuting officers to be the same that will be used against Father Crociata, there is speculation concerning what punishment, if any, may fall upon the priest.

The trial just finished was replete with sensational features, it being said by several witnesses, among whom was Gaspar Crociata, the priest's brother, who is also accused of being an accessory to the murder of Santoro, that Father Crociata sanctioned the luring of the man to an out-of-the-way spot by Anna Black, the beautiful young girl under arrest for complicity in the crime.

OLDEST CONGRESSMAN TO QUIT PUBLIC LIFE

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2.—Nehemiah D. Sperry, the oldest member of Congress, has given notice of his intention to withdraw from public life at the close of his next term, after he had been renominated by acclamation at Middletown to represent again the Second Connecticut Congress District. He has served continuously since 1894. He is eighty-one years old.

BUTLER AMES INDORSED BY DEMOCRATS

In Stormy Convention at Lowell the Democrats Support Republican.

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Oct. 2.—In a stormy convention held here to-day, in which Humphrey O'Sullivan was the storm centre, the Democrats of the fifth congressional district, known as the "fighting fifth," endorsed the nomination of Congressman Butler Ames, the Republican nominee.

Daniel J. O'Brien, who nominated Ames, had no sooner ceased speaking when Humphrey O'Sullivan rose and angrily denounced O'Brien as a traitor to his party and accused him of selling out to the opposition. O'Brien demanded a retraction and Chairman W. F. King rapped repeatedly for order, and finally declared that he would have O'Sullivan ejected from the hall if he did not come to order.

O'Sullivan nominated Joseph J. Flynn of Lawrence and the nomination was seconded by the Lawrence delegation, but when the ballots were counted it was found that but one vote had been cast for Flynn, O'Sullivan's supporters having deserted him when it was shown that the sentiment of the convention was strongly in favor of indorsing the Republican nominee.

WILSON LEFT HIS DAUGHTER $10,000

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The will of the late Walter E. Wilson, a wealthy Buffalonian, whose estate is said to be worth several hundred thousand dollars, was filed for probate here yesterday. Mrs. Gertrude Wilson Little of Keene, N. H., daughter of the testator, will receive only $10,000.

GARFIELD'S SON HURT ON GRIDIRON

WITH ACTRESS ON OCEAN, LID OFF ELKINS SCANDAL

MISS LONSDALE'S LAWYERS, ANGRY AT THE FLIGHT TO EUROPE, GIVE OUT LETTERS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Louise Lonsdale has flown to Europe and dropped her $100,000 breach of promise suit against Blaine Elkins.

Her attorneys, the Epstein brothers, are angry at the suit being dismissed without her consulting them, and have removed the "lid" from a barrel full of additional love letters. It is believed that the lid won't be slammed down very hard until the Epsteins are paid their counsel fees.

Elkins's counsel and friend, Edward B. Coyne, of No. 25 Broad street, declares false a report that the actress has been bundled away to Europe with expenses paid and a settlement of $50 a week for life in consideration of the letters she wrote to the public and to the judge of the West Virginia court, saying she never intended to bring suit against the Senator's son.

Miss Lonsdale and Miss Margaret Carroll, of No. 60 South Tenth street, Brooklyn, sailed on the Philadelphia on September 26.

Don't Believe Denials.

The actress's lawyers say they don't believe the denials of a settlement by their client behind their backs, while Mr. Coyne admits that "somebody might have sent her some money to go out of town and avoid the notoriety, but if some good angel did put a ticket to Europe in the little actress's purse he is ignorant of it.

"I am positive, however, that if any large amount, such as the $50,000 mentioned in certain reports, had been settled on her I should have known it, and I can say the story is positively false," Mr. Coyne assured a reporter.

Among the new love letters published to-day is one on the letter-head of the Coal & Coke Railway Company, office of Vice-President J. T. Davis, Miss Lonsdale received while stopping at Schroon Lake, N. Y., in September, 1905, which says:

"Dear Lonsdale: Just got back last night and am sending 50 this A. M. Hope it will help you out some. Wish you could have staid but it would have been expensive and I would have been mighty sleepy and tired. Hope you haven't been worried too much. I have been sober and not south C. however fell down bad couldn't walk talk or see found him in front of our house afraid he has gone off in. Thought you would write me here.

"There are telegrams also from Blaine's brother that indicate more than a lurking suspicion in the family that a wire to Miss Lonsdale's hotel in New York would find Blaine.

"Be sure to have Blaine leave at once; important. Davis," is a telegram dated at the Jersey City depot July 7, 1905, and sent to "Mrs. Lonsdale, 149 West Forty-fourth street, New York." Davis is one of Blaine's four brothers.

"Turn Down the Glass."

A Washington telegram of December 31, one not given, was:

Miss L. Lonsdale, 17 East Eleventh street, New York:

Don't know just when I reach town. Happy New Year. Turn down the empty glass. Wish you all happiness.

BLANEY.

The import of the following telegram is not explained:

Philadelphia, May 18.

Miss L. Lonsdale, Lafayette-Brevoort House, New York:

Let her pound; her ribs are made of oak. Will be back to kiss my girl on the lips.

BLAINE.

A colored picture postcard marked Frankfort-on-Main, June 21, 1904, reached Miss Lonsdale at the Lafayette-Brevoort. "Blaine's" didn't sign it. But two little German boys are kissing by the blue sea, with a billygoat looking on conveyed some message linked with the words in Blaine's familiar hand: "This is all right, too, but I am in the background," said background being indicated by a marker pointing to the goat.

PHONOGRAPH DEALERS FIGHT EDISON EDICT

Nine hundred dealers in all parts of the United States have been heard from who are willing to join a talking machine association with the object of obtaining fair treatment from manufacturers. Dealers have been driven to action by a notice to all Edison jobbers and dealers, sent out over the signature of President Frank L. Dyer of the National Phonograph Company. This notice reads:

"We beg to announce that on and after October 1, 1908 (unless extended as hereinafter provided), we will refuse to fill orders for Edison phonographs and records from jobbers or dealers who may handle other lines of cylinder machines and cylinder records, except such other cylinder machines as may have been taken in exchange for Edison phonographs, as permitted by our agreements.

"In order that entire justice may be done to any jobbers or dealers who may have in stock considerable quantities of other cylinder machines and cylinder records, we will, upon application to us in any particular case, consent to an extension of this time to December 1, 1908, in which to dispose of such stocks, but in no case will we supply Edison phonographs and records to jobbers and dealers who, after October 1, 1908, may continue to purchase other cylinder machines and records."

This notice was dated August 1 last.

The dealers believe that if they are united in a strong organization they will be protected from any attempt to form a phonograph trust.

The American Talking Machine Dealers' Association was formed at the Revere House last evening, and officers were chosen as follows: W. A. Pike of Boston, president; George W. Lord of Lynn, vice-president; Maurice J. Harrison of Boston, treasurer, and Attorney Joseph W. Foley of Boston, secretary-consul.

RECEPTION TO VAHEY.

The members of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Ward 20 will give a reception to-night at their clubrooms, No. 366 Bowdoin street, Dorchester, to James H. Vahey, Democratic nominee for Governor, and to Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell. The latter is a former president of the club.

SWAN BEATEN IN FIGHT TO KEEP CHILD

Joseph W. Swan, the wealthy real estate man of Everett, who kidnapped his son, Robert G. Swan, after his wife had secured a divorce and the custody of her boy in the Massachusetts courts, has lost at every stage of his fight, for his wife's divorce has become absolute and Swan has been run down in Brazil, where he fled with his son.

Police inspectors who found the fugitive father with his boy in South America will be back in Boston on November 23 with the child, who will be home to spend Thanksgiving Day with his mother.

Swan, it is said, is broken-hearted over the futile result of his long and sensational fight for his child. It is declared that such is his grief and chagrin that he will never return to Everett or Boston again. Shortly after his wife left him and began divorce proceedings Swan kidnapped his boy and vanished.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATIC PAINS

Are Nature's Danger Signals. The Best Remedy Known for Them.

The following prescription, while very simple and harmless, will be found to work wonders in curing lame back and all kinds of rheumatism, purifying the blood and kidneys and restoring the system to health and vigor. It is inexpensive considering its effectiveness, and can be mixed at home.

Get one ounce Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris Compound. These to be added to half pint of whiskey and used in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bed time. The bottle must be shaken well each time.

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Calcago, but it, as well as the other ingredients, can be had from any good druggist.

Good results from this treatment are apparent after the first few doses, although it would be a mistake to discontinue its use until the health is fully restored.

TAFT HEADED FOR COLORADO

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., Oct. 2.—William Howard Taft arrived here early today on his way to Denver, and was met at the station by a large crowd. Mr. Taft was accompanied by Senator Dolliver of Iowa. He continued his tactics of holding up Bryan's record and asking the people if they thought a man with such a record would create a feeling of security and stability in the government.

WED TO FOUR; SENT TO JAIL

Edward Tracey of Hyde Park, was today sentenced to not more than three and one-half years nor less than two and one-half years in State Prison at Charlestown, by Judge Harris in the Norfolk County Superior Court at Dedham. Tracey was arrested last May at the instance of Clara B. Dixon, with whom he had entered into polygamous marriage in 1902. It was shown during the trial that Tracey had married four Hyde Park women at various times between October, 1894, and September, 1907. His last marriage was to Rose May Mason, and he was living with her in Charlestown when he was arrested.

The Stomach Does Not Cause Dyspepsia

Neither Will It Cure It Because the Lack of Gastric Juices Prohibits Relief.

The stomach is a strong, powerful organ, which is composed of muscles of great strength. It is filled during digestion with gastric juices which, when the stomach, extending and compressing the food, dissolve it and separate the nourishment from the waste matter. If, however, these gastric juices are lacking, the stomach is not capable of digesting its food because it has not the tools with which to work successfully.

The gastric juices when in a perfect state do away with all foul odors, fermentation and decay, reduce the food to a disintegrated mass and the stomach then presses it into the intestines where another form of digestion takes place. Then the intestines take from this mass of food all that is nourishing and give it to the blood. The waste matter is thrown from the system.

If instead of nourishment the intestines receive impure deposits combined with a poisonous and imperfect gastric juice, it can be readily seen that they must turn such imperfect nourishment into the blood. The blood then being unable to give each part of the body that which it requires, becomes impoverished and disease is spread broadcast.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets correct such a condition at once. If the gastric juices are lacking and imperfect these tablets do their work just the same. They build up the elements in the juice which are lacking and remove those elements which cause disturbance.

Meat, grains, fluids, vegetables and delicacies, in fact each portion of a large meal, have been placed in a glass vial and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have digested them to a perfect fluid just as a healthy stomach would do.

A large complex, hearty meal holds no terrors for a dyspeptic if Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are used. Abnormal eating, late dinners, rich foods cause ill effects to the stomach, but when Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are used one may eat when and what one will without danger of dyspepsia or discomfort.

Forty thousand physicians endorse and prescribe Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and every druggist carries them in stock, price 50c. Send us your name and address and we will send you at once by mail a sample package free. Address, F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

BRICE TELLS OFFICER HE'S SORRY; PAYS $5

Wealthy Newporter Had $100,000 in Pockets When Captured for Drunkenness.

John Francis Brice of Newport and New York, Harvard '99, and son of the late United States Senator Calvin Brice of Ohio, ate very humble pie in Jamaica Plain District Court to-day when he apologized with much meekness to Patrolman Seymour Butler for ruining the patrolman's uniform and bruising his face when Brice was arrested last night for being drunk and disorderly.

Brice got off with a $5 fine on the drunkenness charge. He could amply afford the fine. When searched after arrest he had over $100,000 in trust company notes payable to his order.

Patrolman Butler was evidently reluctant to accept Brice's apology, but finally did so, and in telling the story of the arrest did not give the details of the scrap put up by Brice till closely questioned by Judge Perrin.

Ready to Pay for Uniform.

After the hearing Brice prevailed on the policeman to go with him to Captain Westcott and see about getting reimbursed for his uniform.

Brice was arrested last night at the corner of Washington and School streets, Jamaica Plain, after he had caused a disturbance near the entrance of St. Mary of the Angels Church, at the corner of Walnut street and Columbus avenue. The police say that he insulted members of the congregation. Patrolman Butler started after Brice. The latter ran but was caught. Brice received an abrasion of the skin under his right ear, and Butler's uniform was torn and mud-stained in rolling on the ground with his prisoner. Brice is over 6 feet tall and an athlete from his "prep" school days, while Butler is a smaller man.

$100,000 in Pockets.

Brice gave his name at Jamaica Plain station as John Brown, but documents showing he was Brice were found on him. He had only $2.10 in cash, but among his papers were notes on the Newport Trust Company for over $100,000 payable to him. One of these alone was for $35,000.

Brice said the last he could recall was leaving Newport last week Thursday to come to Boston.

Early to-day Colonel John T. Wheelwright went to the station as counsel for Brice, bailed him out and took him into court at 9 o'clock. Brice looked much the worse for the wear, unshaven and with hair mussed.

Patrolman Butler wore the torn and mud-stained uniform in which he arrested Brice. Butler also had bruises on his face and on one hand.

Without waiting for his client to get before the court, Colonel Wheelwright hustled over to Patrolman Butler and talked earnestly with him. Then Wheelwright took Brice over to Butler and he gave Butler a complete and humble apology for the damage he had done to Butler.

"I am very, very sorry, Mr. Butler," said Brice in an almost pleading tone.

It isn't every day that a Boston patrolman gets such a "laydown" from a man who has $100,000 awaiting him in the station house safe.

Butler Very Forgiving.

When Butler took the stand to tell his story he merely said that Brice was very drunk.

Judge Perrin may have "suspicioned" something, for he said to Butler: "Any disturbance?"

Butler: "They told me he was acting like a crazy man, but I saw nothing of that."

Judge Perrin: "Well, what then?"

Butler: "He resisted arrest a bit, but did not assault me."

Later Judge Perrin recalled Butler to the stand and asked for more detail. Butler said:

"I got marks on my face in the struggle Brice made to get away, my clothes were torn and I went down."

Then Brice pleaded guilty to drunkenness and paid a $5 fine. He went over to Butler after that and asked if he could pay for a new uniform. Butler declined, but Colonel Wheelwright urged him to let Brice reimburse him, so Butler finally said: "Well, I can't take the money myself, but come in and see Captain Westcott."

The three left for the Captain's office.

BOSTON BOOMS O'NEILL; LOWELL BACKS OSGOOD

MANY CANDIDATES FOR STATE TICKET AT INDEPENDENCE CONVENTION TO-MORROW.

The Boston delegates to the Independence League State Convention will meet at the State headquarters in the Old South Building this evening for the purpose of holding a caucus for the selection of their favorites in the numerous contests that now seem likely. The State Convention will be called to order in Faneuil Hall to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The State Committee is to meet at 11 o'clock at the Old South Building headquarters.

Nothing like the enthusiasm which is now being manifested has been known among the Massachusetts members since the birth of the organization.

There appears to be a very strong feeling among Boston Independents in favor of Michael C. O'Neill of the Allston district for Governor, although as a matter of fact Ward 21 has declared for a Lowell man, Dennis J. Ring, who has been a stalwart champion of the Independence movement from its inception, and who last year had a place of honor on the State ticket. Mr. Ring might indeed come down to the Faneuil Hall convention to-morrow with the solid backing of a big delegation from the Spindle City, were it not for the fact that he has made it known that he cannot run. The demands of his growing business are so great that they cannot be turned aside at this time and Mr. Ring is doing all he can to bring about the selection of the Hon. William N. Osgood, his fellow-townsman, as the leader of the State ticket.

Lowell for Osgood.

The Lowell delegation has endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Osgood, who is a distinguished attorney, and has promised to put up a strong battle for him. North Attleboro is also pledged to Osgood, while the Lawrence delegation has adopted resolutions favorable to a ticket led by O'Neill and Sawyer, the "Sawyer" of this combination being the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Haverhill, one of the State league leaders.

William D. Ring of Lowell is being boomed by his friends for the nomination as attorney-general.

Down Plymouth way the Independents of the Twelfth Congressional District have unanimously indorsed Joseph G. Jackson for Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Jackson, who is a former member of the State Legislature, was for many years prominent in the ranks of textile workers.

John E. Dempsey is put forward for a place on the State ticket by his associates in the Fall River delegation.

West Springfield, which claims some recognition at the hands of an Independence League State convention, because it gave a Thomas L. Hisgen to the movement, respectfully submits the name of Frank P. Sargent for second place. Sargent is a strong union labor man, a former Republican, and, as such, a member of the House of Representatives.

His eloquent address on the occasion of the home-coming of Mr. Hisgen following the Chicago convention is still a subject of conversation in his home town. It is expected that Mr. Sargent will make a splendid showing in to-morrow's convention.

Charles E. Butterworth of Somerville is talked of for State Treasurer, while there is an insistent movement on foot in favor of asking George S. Whitbeck of Northampton to take a place on the ticket.

Ask Aiken as Elector.

The extreme western part of the State asks but little at the hands of the convention, but there is a desire in that, as well as in the eastern section, that one of the two nominees for electors-at-large shall be William F. Aiken of Greenfield, treasurer of the Greenfield Savings Bank and brother of Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court. Mr. Aiken is an enthusiastic Independence party man. In a recent letter to a Boston friend in the movement he expressed the great pleasure which he experienced in voting for Mr. Hisgen last year for Governor and promises himself still greater pleasure in again voting for Mr. Hisgen this year for President.

Mr. Aiken will take a prominent part in the welcome home Springfield is getting up for Mr. Hisgen on the eve of election.

Richard J. Talbot of Springfield, who was a member of the platform committee at Chicago, and who has been recommended for chairman of to-morrow's committee on resolutions, has prepared a rough draft of a very strong State platform.

As usual, there will be splendid music by Benevente's Boston Band, and the galleries will be open to the public.

FIGHT PLANS FOR SUBWAY

Cambridge citizens were out in force in the aldermanic chamber last night protesting against the subway plans which provide for an open cut in Massachusetts avenue just below Central square. Mayor Wardwell presided at the hearing and listened to remonstrances from the Citizens' Trade Association and individuals who declared that the proposed open cut would be a serious menace to business and property interests.

Two other plans are presented, one for a station in Central square and the other for stations on private property where passengers may be transferred to and from surface cars.

$100,000 BLAZE AT CARNEGIE PLANT

WHEELING W. Va., Oct. 2.—Fire at the Bellaire street plant of the Carnegie Steel Company destroyed the supply department, involving a loss of $100,000, including the entire supply of patterns dating back for thirty years and valued at $60,000.

WIZARD ONAIP AMAZES THRONG

The thousands who were at the Boston Retail Grocers' Food Fair in the Park Square Coliseum last night wondered how Onaip, the Hindoo illusionist, waved his hands and caused a piano and pianist to rise in the air, apparently unsupported, and to float in wide circles through space.

"How does he do it?" everyone is asking to-day. A great hoop was passed over and around the piano and pianist to prove that no concealed wire cables supported them. The playing continued while the pianist sat in space and at times rose to his feet and again stood on his head in midair.

MARATHON WINNER DENIES ENGAGEMENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—John Hayes, the winner of the Marathon race at the Olympic games in London, denies the report that he was engaged to a New York school teacher. "If there is such a person in love with me," he said, "and following me about from town to town, as the report states, I am in complete ignorance of the fact, and that is all I can say about it."

HURRIES TRIAL OF MERGER SUIT

Attorney-General Bonaparte has caused a motion to be filed in the United States Circuit Court in the case of the United States vs. the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company et al, the merger suit, seeking an assignment of the action for a hearing at the earliest practical day. He says in his motion: "I hereby certify that, in my opinion, the case is of general public importance, and request that the same be given precedence over others and in every way expedited and be assigned for hearing at the earliest practicable day, before not less than three circuit judges of the first judicial circuit."

TRIES TO KILL SON FOR REFUSING MONEY

UNION HILL, N. J., Oct. 2.—Because his son Richard refused to give him money which he demanded, John Burkhardt, sixty-six years old, shot and seriously wounded the younger man, then drank carbolic acid and jumped from a window of his home in an effort to end his life. While father and son were being rushed to a hospital in an ambulance the old man sprang upon the wounded boy and attempted to strangle him.

CURE FOLLOWED YEAR OF AGONY

Intense Itching Eczema Drove Him Nearly to Despair—Chief Surgeon of a London Hospital Called It Worst Case He Had Ever Seen—Got Little or No Relief Until

CUTICURA STOPPED HIS UNBEARABLE TORTURE

"About four years ago, in London, I was troubled by a severe itching and dry, scurfy skin on my ankles and feet. The same, in a few days, was the case with my arms and scalp. I could hardly keep from scratching, which, I need hardly say, made it worse. Then large red patches appeared, with inflammation and soreness. After ten days, thousands of small red pimples formed. On becoming dry, these caused intense itching. I was advised to go to the hospital for diseases of the skin. I did so and was an out-patient for a month or more, the chief surgeon saying: 'I never saw such a bad case of eczema.' But I got little or no relief. Then I tried many so-called remedies, but I became so bad that I almost gave up in despair. On coming to this country I heard so many accounts of cures by Cuticura Remedies that I resolved, as a last resource, to give them a trial. This was after suffering agonies for twelve months, and right glad am I that I did so, for I was relieved of the almost unbearable itching after two or three applications of Cuticura Ointment. I continued its use, combined with a liberal use of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Resolvent Pills and am more than thankful to say that after using three sets of the Remedies, I was completely cured. I can only add that, should any one be suffering as I did, I hope that they will do as I did, and I am sure of the results. Henry Searle, 2022 Cross St., Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8 and 10, '07."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap (25c.) to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment (50c.) to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent (50c.), (or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60) to Purify the Blood. REV. DR. MANN CHOSEN BISHOP OF WASHINGTON

Rector of Trinity Church, Boston, Gets Place Brent Twice Declined.

TO SUCCEED SATTERLEE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Dr. Alexander Mann of Trinity Episcopal Church, Boston, has been elected bishop of the Protestant diocese of Washington.

Bishop Brent of the Philippines had twice declined the honor after being elected.

The vacancy was caused by the death of Bishop Henry Y. Satterlee.

Dr. Mann was born in Geneva, N. Y., in 1860. His father was the late Rev. Duncan Cameron Mann, who was the rector of the church at Watkins Glen, N. Y. After a common school education the Rev. Dr. Mann went to Hobart College, from which he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1881. In the Fall of that year he entered the General Theological Seminary in New York, being graduated from there in 1885.

Dr. Mann is very proficient in Latin, Greek, Hebrew and a French scholar. He is full of energy, large of frame and figure, keenly observant and at all times self-possessed. He speaks easily and gracefully, and although he uses no notes his sermons always show profound study and preparation.

Following his ordination as deacon he went to St. James's Church in Buffalo, where in 1886 he was ordained priest. His ordination was at the hands of the Right Rev. Dr. Cleveland Coxe, who had also made him deacon, and it took place, as did the first ceremony, on Trinity Sunday. Dr. Mann remained at St. James's Church until he went to Grace Church, in Orange, N. J., in 1887. He received his doctor of divinity degree from Hobart College in 1902.

In 1905, after many other calls, he accepted that of the pastorate of Trinity Church in Boston, where he has been very popular since he assumed the duties of that pulpit.

BANKERS TO MEET IN CHICAGO NEXT

DENVER, Col., Oct. 2.—Chicago was chosen as the place for next year's meeting by the American Bankers' Association to-day. Before the day is over it is expected that Mr. George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental National Bank, will be made president of the association. Aside from the election of officers the questions of deposit guaranty and currency reform aroused great interest.

CROKER COMING BACK.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—That Richard Croker, the former Tammany leader, will come to New York shortly after the election, is the announcement made by his son, Richard, Jr. Mr. Croker, Jr., said his father was in excellent health.

NO MAN CAN DELIVER THE LABOR VOTE

—Norman McPhail

Says to Allow It Would Be Suicide to Union Movement of Country.

DECLARES CLAIM ABSURD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Declaring that it would be suicidal to the labor movement for "any man or set of men" to deliver the vote of organized labor to any party, President Norman E. McPhail of the Boston, Mass., Typographical Union, has written a letter to Chief Willis L. Moore of the United States Weather Bureau, declaring that the labor vote as a body cannot be delivered. The letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Moore—Your letter of September 22 has just been received and read by me, as I have to-day returned from a tour of some of our New England cities for our organization.

"In reply to the question you ask me, I will state that in my opinion the vote of organized labor in this country as a body will not, should not and can not be delivered to any one party by any man or set of men. To allow such a thing would be suicidal to the labor movement of the country. Members of labor unions, as citizens, have the right and should carefully consider the platforms and promises of the different political parties and should vote as they believe the broadest and best interests of our country lie. There can be no objection to this from any one, and it is something which every citizen should do. To claim that any man or set of men, as has been blazoned forth in the newspapers, will deliver the vote of organized labor to any party is absurd, as it is an impossibility. Sincerely yours,

"NORMAN E. McPHAIL."

ANGERED WOMAN SHOOTS TORMENTOR

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 2.—Mrs. Lena Wethington shot down Edward Powers at Griswold and Michigan avenues at midnight. Powers, the woman asserts, has followed her a long time, annoying, threatening and at times actually abusing her. The wounded man may recover. The woman's husband, a mulatto, was with her when she shot the man.

AUTO CRASHES INTO TROLLEY; TWO DEAD

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 2.—Speeding westward on Jefferson avenue, near Hurlbut avenue, an automobile driven at the rate of fifty miles an hour collided with an eastbound Jefferson car. One woman of the party of six that occupied the machine was killed. One man was so badly hurt that he died.

Catarrhal Sufferers Free
Will You Accept Instant Relief

SEND us your name on a postal.
We will mail you a sample of Kondon's Catarrhal Jelly free.

—Enough for several days' treatment.

—Enough to prove to you conclusively that it is the most marvelous remedy for catarrh, the pleasantest, safest, most soothing and healing method for the treatment of this foul disease.

—You can prove all we say is true by personal use at the cost of only a penny for a postal.

—Dr. Kondon discovered the catarrh microbe. He formulated in his own laboratory, Kondon's Catarrhal Jelly, a certain combination of powerful antiseptic elements which effectually destroys the catarrh germ and at the same time soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces of the mucous membrane. It contains no cocaine, iodine or other harmful drug.

—Kondon's Catarrhal Jelly is applied directly on the raw surfaces.

IT reduces the thickened membranes, stops abnormal discharges, clears the nasal passages for easy, natural breathing, and permits the air to pass through the lungs over healthy surfaces.

—That is the logical way to cure catarrh. Dr. Kondon's way.

—You would not apply salt water to a wound—nor spray it with a violent medicine which would burn, itch and irritate the raw places.

—For the same reason you should stop the use of sprays, snuffs, douches and atomizers for catarrh. The delicate lining of the nasal passages is raw, inflamed, sore from the action of the catarrh germs.

KONDON'S CATARRHAL JELLY

—You owe it to yourself to test this wonderful remedy. We make it easy for you to prove that catarrh can be cured.

—The blessed relief the free sample will bring you, will encourage you to continue its use until a complete cure is effected. Write for it today. Don't delay.

—You cannot afford to neglect nasal catarrh even in its earliest stages. It will not get better of itself. Neglect of cold in the head opens the way for the attack of the catarrh germs. Try the sample. It points the way to a speedy cure.

Ask Your Druggist Or Physician

—10,000,000 packages of this wonderful remedy have been sold in 15 years. Thousands have testified to its merits in unsolicited letters. Read this:

Only ten cents a week to keep yourself at your best. To always feel as you feel on your good days. Cascarets ward off all the little ills.

Primitive men did not need Cascarets.

They lived out-doors, ate plenty of fruit, and all of their food was coarse.

We modern people are different.

We exercise too little, eat little fruit; and our food is too fine, too rich.

We can't have the bowels clogged up and keep well.

It means that the food retained there decays. The decay creates poisons. And those poisons are sucked into the blood through the very ducts intended to suck in the nutriment.

So we must make our choice.

We must live, to an extent, like the primitive man, else we must eat Cascarets.

Cascarets do what the right food would do, what plenty of exercise does.

The effect is as natural from one as the other.

The question is one of convenience.

If you choose Cascarets, take them as you take food. Not in large doses rarely, but a tablet at a time.

That is the way to keep well.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with C C C on every tablet. The price is 50 cents, 25 cents and

SAY WOMAN AIDED $50,000 GEM ROBBERY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A young woman, it developed to-day, was concerned in the $50,000 diamond robbery, of which Oliver M. Farrand of No. 3 Maiden Lane, one of the wealthiest diamond importers in the city, was the victim. Mr. Farrand admitted this to-day, and said the theft was committed by his trusted clerk, Henry F. Marschner, who has disappeared.

"I cannot tell how much was stolen," Mr. Farrand said. "We have taken steps, however, to catch the thief, and I believe we will find him."

The young woman in the case was formerly employed by Mr. Farrand. It is intimated that it was through her that Marschner was enabled to get off with the diamonds.

Marschner had been in Mr. Farrand's employ sixteen years. He had been in this country twenty years. In appearance he is tall, blonde and good looking. Mr. Farrand trusted him absolutely and had named him in his will.

HOUSE-WARMING AT THE RANELEGH

Andrew Andersson, proprietor of the Hotel Ranelegh at the corner of Beacon and Mountfort streets, presided at a house-warming to Mrs. G. G. Smith, who is now managing the hotel. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Andersson, Mrs. E. R. Gilmore of Easton, Mrs. Chapman and Miss Chapman of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Crane, George Francis, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hardy, Frank Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hall and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Legg.

A SIMPLE FORMULA.

The Best Thing Known for Treating Dandruff and Other Scalp and Hair Troubles.

There are no better things known for treating the hair and scalp than the following: Refined soap, white of eggs, glycerin, cochin cocoanut oil and salicylic acid. The refined soap is used to cleanse the hair and scalp of dirt and impurities generally. The cochin cocoanut oil helps to make a profuse lather, and gives a beautiful, silky gloss to the hair. The white of eggs loosens the dandruff and scales on the scalp, and is one of the finest things known for this purpose. Glycerin is a valuable thing in all skin troubles. It softens, soothes and heals the scalp, and its emollient properties are known to everybody. Salicylic acid is a great destroyer of germs and bacteria. It is also one of the standard antiseptics, and prevents the disagreeable odors that are often found on the head and hair. Instead of going to the trouble and expense of securing these ingredients and mixing them yourself, we advise you to buy Birt's Head Wash, which is made exactly according to the above formula. Your hair ought to be washed often, because cleanliness is the very first thing needed to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and to overcome nearly every other scalp and hair trouble. You can use Birt's Head Wash at least once a week, because you can see from the formula that it is perfectly safe for men, women and children. If you wash your hair with common soaps and shampoos, it will become dry, faded and lifeless, as they often contain too much alkali or potash. Birt's Head Wash doesn't merely clean your scalp and hair. It doesn't merely make a lot of lather. It leaves the hair glossy and the scalp healthy. It keeps the pores of the scalp open so the hair follicles can secure proper nourishment. When you are through using Birt's Head Wash your hair will not be dry, but will be silky, soft and lustrous, and your scalp will be perfectly clean. If your druggist will not supply you, send 50c in stamps or money order to Birt's Head Wash, 576 Fifth avenue, New York, and a package will be sent you by prepaid mail.

EDNA GOT BROKER'S $25,000 LIFE POLICY

BROWN SAYS HE GAVE IT TO MISS HOPPER A FEW WEEKS AFTER THEY MET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A. O. Brown, head of the defunct New York Stock Exchange firm of A. O. Brown & Co., testified before Commissioner Gilchrist in bankruptcy proceedings that he had known Edna Wallace Hopper, the actress, only a few weeks when, on March 2 last, he gave her a $7,000 automobile. Mr. Brown did not seem to enjoy giving this testimony, but it was brought out under sharp examination.

Mr. Brown also testified, in answer to questions by the attorney for Receiver Littlefield, that he had turned over a $25,000 insurance policy on his life to Edna Wallace Hopper, and that Miss Hopper now has the policy. This present also was made in March at about the time Mr. Brown gave Miss Hopper the automobile. His only explanation of the two transactions was that he desired to make Miss Hopper a present.

"Fixed Up" Coombs Company.

It was also brought out through testimony given by J. W. Rhodes, cashier of the failed firm, that just after the suspension of A. O. Brown & Co., Mr. Coombs of Coombs & Co. called at the office for the purpose of "being fixed up."

Mr. Rhodes said that he, after the suspension of A. O. Brown & Company, took the strong box of the firm to the office of Coombs & Company and left there such securities as were in the box with the exception of $64,000 of Whitney Company bonds, of which only $58,000 was subsequently turned over to the receiver of A. O. Brown & Company. The securities delivered to Coombs & Company after the suspension were estimated to be worth between $30,000 and $40,000. Most of these securities were sold by Coombs & Company and the proceeds, amounting to about $30,000 applied to a loan owed to them by A. O. Brown & Company.

Gave Miss Hopper Policy.

Mr. Brown followed Mr. Rhodes on the witness stand and was asked by Mr. Hays, attorney for Receiver Littlefield, whether he had a life insurance policy.

"Yes," was the reply.

"What amount was it for?" asked Mr. Hays.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars."

"How long ago was it taken out?"

"Twelve years ago."

"Whom was it made payable to?"

"To Mary C. Brown, who was then my wife."

"Is she deceased?"

"Yes."

"Who has it now?"

"Miss Hopper."

"State Miss Hopper's full name."

"Edna Wallace Hopper."

Louis Ginter Young said that he also had owned an automobile for which he had paid $8,500. He had turned this car over to his mother on May 1, he said, as security for a loan. The witness testified that he had received $25,000 from the estate of Louis Ginter, his uncle, but declared that he had put it into the firm at the time of becoming a member.

A special meeting will be held to-night by Structural Iron Workers No. 7 to take action on the death of Edward Riley of East Boston, a charter member, who was killed by accident in Providence last Thursday.

Machinist No. 264 chose H. W. Churchill, chairman, and Frank Jennings, secretary, for its committee on the formation of a Metal Trades Section of the Boston C. L. U. Information was received from San Francisco that employers there will grant the eight-hour workday basis within a year.

LOST; A HURRICANE; LET REJOICE BOSTON

The hurricane which had its inception in the West Indies, and was reported to be tearing up the coast toward Boston yesterday, has gone astray. Storm signals were ordered up all along the New England coast yesterday, but to-day the weather sharps have been unable to locate the big wind, and believe that it caromed off against Cape Hatteras and went to sea to make trouble for sailors in that latitude.

BLOOD

When this important fluid becomes contaminated by the bite of poisonous insects, contact with poison ivy or the brown-tail moth, as well as from being over-heated, then the general health is apt to be affected. At all times of the year, but especially in summer, is Cabot's Sulpho-Napthol a necessity. A few drops in the bath is cooling and healing, and will prevent Prickly heat, Chafes and Soreness due to excessive perspiration. When used as a cure for bites and stings of insects or poison ivy, its action will be surprising. Remember that while Sulpho-Napthol is the greatest help for house cleaning it is also invaluable as an adjunct of the bath, or, when diluted, used exactly as you would any liniment. Its value is due to the fact that it positively kills germs that cause trouble.

Sold only in yellow packages by druggists and grocers for 10c, 25c, 50c and $1.00. Never sold under any other name. Beware of imitations. Sulpho-Napthol Company, 20 Haymarket Sq., Manufacturers. Sawyer Crystal Blue Company, Selling Agents, Boston, Mass.

WINS DECREE FROM HUSBAND

Mrs. Alice D. Hart Floyd, wife of Andrew S. Floyd, the leader of a "Self-mastery" colony at North Carver, to-day won her suit for separate maintenance against her husband. Judge George F. Lawton, in the Middlesex County Probate Court at East Cambridge, gave her the custody of her eight-year-old daughter Olive, and ordered her husband to pay $3 a week for the support of the child.

Last month Mrs. Floyd, who was Miss Alice Hart, daughter of a rich Charlestown man, startled society by filing a suit for divorce against her husband, a suit for $10,000 against Miss Lillian B. Kline for alleged alienation of her husband's affections, and having her husband and Miss Kline arrested. The divorce and alienation suits are now pending in court. Miss Kline is said to be one of the most beautiful women ever seen in Plymouth County, where she was arrested, and is said to have been a New York model.

NIGHT MAILS A SUCCESS

Postmaster Mansfield declares that the evening delivery of mail in the Back Bay and Fenway districts is a success. The first night's delivery disposed of a great quantity of this commercial mail, and last night's delivery also helped relieve the regular monthly rush in the ordinary mail matter.

Residents of these districts are reported as being greatly pleased with the service.

On Oct. 18 the residential section of Beacon Hill will also be favored with an evening delivery, starting at 7 o'clock. If the test in these three sections proves satisfactory it is believed that Postmaster-General Meyer will permit Postmaster Mansfield to extend the service.

PHELAN BEGINS HIS CAMPAIGN

Thomas F. Phelan, Independence League candidate for the House of Representatives in Ward 17, has arranged a plan of campaign from now on till the night before election day. Rallies are to be held in every precinct in the ward and committees of young men representing Phelan will make a house to house canvass in behalf of his candidacy.

Last year Phelan was a candidate on the League ticket for the Common Council and polled close to 1,000 votes. This year as a candidate for the House of Representatives he will point to a number of improvements he assisted in securing for the ward, notably the laying out of Larkin street, which runs from Adams street to Hampden street, and the agitation he started in the district for an all-the-year playground, for which the City Council passed an order appropriating the sum of $50,000 to be used in placing one in the district.

JEFF PICKS BURNS TO WIN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 2.—James J. Jeffries is of the belief that Tommy Burns will prove the master of Jack Johnson when they meet in their proposed Australian match. The retired heavyweight champion says Tommy is too clever, too strong and too courageous for the colored fighter and will make him retreat soon after the opening of the battle.

Jeff says it is characteristic with the colored fellow to back up when punished, and Jeff feels that Johnson will certainly come in for punishment. Though censured by Burns, Jeff says he is a better fighter than many give him credit for. That it will be a hard fought battle, one of the best seen in years, Jeff will admit, but he cannot see anything but the white man.

The Most Foolish of All the New Fashions

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOT long ago I was staying in a house where they were giving a dinner dance.

I dressed rather early, and finding time on my hands knocked on the door of my neighbor and asked if I might come in.

"Do come in," she called, "and tell me if you think this rose looks well in my hair, or do I look better without it."

After careful study, I decided in favor of the rose, and then sat chatting as she finished dressing.

Presently there was silence on her part, and I looked up to find her gazing at her pretty reflection in the mirror with undisguised dissatisfaction.

"Why, Daisy, what's the matter?" I said wonderingly.

She turned, with a half-shamed little laugh. "Oh, nothing very much. I simply hate my red face; that's all."

She Had Perfect Rosy Cheeks

The "red face" in question consisted of two exquisitely tinted pink cheeks, so I looked at her in dumb surprise.

"It's the fashion to be pale," she explained. "Red cheeks are quite out of date, and if you want to look smart you must have what is called a clear pallor."

"Clear fiddlesticks," I retorted. "Daisy, how can you be such an unmitigated little goose?"

"I'm not a goose," she pouted. "All the girls are trying to look pale."

"Then all the girls are geese. Don't you know, you silly child, that there is no greater beauty than a good complexion?"

Daisy said nothing, but she picked up a bottle of some milky-looking liquid, looked at me like a naughty child, and with a brush began to apply the contents of the bottle to her face.

Presently she turned away from the glass and standing in front of me said: "Now look at me and see if I am not much improved. At any rate I am following the latest fashion."

Spoiled Her Natural Beauty

"Then all I can say is that the latest fashion is an exceedingly unbecoming and unlovely one. I would hardly know you for the pretty girl you are."

"Do I really look as bad as all that? Nearly every girl here to-night will be nice and pale, and if I don't put this on I alone will look vulgarly healthy."

"Not at all. You alone will be the only girl who will look wholesome and attractive. How can the girls adopt a style which they know all the men will admire so little?"

"We don't dress just to please the men," said Miss Daisy, with a toss of her head.

"Perhaps not, but you all want their admiration and approval, just the same."

"Why should they admire red cheeks so much?"

"Because they know that red cheeks mean health, and there is nothing that a man more adores in a girl than health and wholesomeness. Take my advice, Daisy. Take off your fashionable pallor and be natural."

A Wise Decision and Its Results

"Very well, I will. But I won't be at all fashionable," said Daisy discontentedly.

"But you will be very pretty, and that is a hundred times better," I answered.

Three or four hours later Daisy, flushed and sweet, slipped her hand into mine.

"Oh, I'm having such a good time," she whispered, "and what do you think Dick W—— said?"

"What?" I asked smilingly.

"He said, 'Daisy, I am so glad that you have not followed this idiotic style of making yourself look like a ghost,' and then he said——"

"Well," said I, after a pause. "What else did he say?"

"Oh, nothing," with a blush. "That is, I'll tell you later what else he said."

But I had seen the look in Dick's eyes all evening, and I knew quite well what else he had said.

When a Girl Gets Mad

It Isn't Likely to Be at a Man She Doesn't Care For

IT was the general opinion that among all her alluring qualities what really shone and scintillated about Billy was her surprising good nature. Nothing apparently disturbed her equanimity. Anyone would have known that from her nickname, because no girl is ever called Billy unless people like her.

"Still, you can't always tell," said Bert Smith, judicially, the third day after he had met Billy.

It was a typical remark, for Bert was pre-eminently cautious. He had been known to doubt the goodness of his grandmother's custard pies, and when a man does that he is hopeless.

"You can't always tell about girls," said Bert Smith. "They may seem pleasant enough on the surface, but what are they when you aren't around? Now, I know Billy has the face of an angel and honest eyes and a gurgly laugh—but how do you know she doesn't get madder than a hatter when she finds her sister has worn the waist she had planned to wear herself or when someone spills coffee on her new party gown? I'm free to confess that as things stand she can have me——"

Common Sense a Requisite

"Not while I'm on earth," serenely objected his brother Frank. "I don't like cross or snappy people myself, but I'll bet Billy is all right.

"Of course," went on Frank, "a fellow has to use common sense when he picks out the girl he wants to marry and not go into it haphazard, but I'm sure she has a good disposition. Still, it would be pretty awful, wouldn't it, after you were married, to find the girl was not as sweet as she had appeared? There's no telling!"

"Yes, there is," said Bert. "We might try to make Billy mad. We could make unpleasant things happen, you know, and test her disposition. I can have the automobile break down the next time I take her driving."

"She won't have to crawl underneath the machine and fix it, though," suggested his brother.

"But she'll have to walk home," triumphantly said Bert. "I don't know of anything more annoying than walking a mile when you've started out to ride."

Had a Chance to Test Her

However, when a few days later the automobile did break down when Billy was a passenger, it did so quite unexpectedly and of its own accord, four miles from the Summer resort cottages.

"Hang it all!" Bert said, ruefully, dusting off his hands, after vainly fussing with the machinery. "And the thermometer in the nineties!"

"Never mind!" said Billy cheerfully. "It'll be fun to walk."

There was no deception in her gaze or smile—she meant it.

"I'm glad you look at it that way," grumbled Bert. "I don't see any particular fun in a country road, ankle-deep with dust and no shade!"

The end of the tramp found Billy dusty, but still rosy-cheeked and laughing, while Bert, a wilted, growling wreck, hated the world and all in it.

Two days later Frank and Billy started out to paddle up Pine Creek. At noon Frank appeared at the hotel luncheon with an elaborate tale of a violent quarrel with the young woman.

More Likely a Sense of Humor

"She got mad at something I said," he related triumphantly, "and got out of the canoe and walked back. Of course I had to follow to see that she didn't get lost, and we came the whole five miles without a word from her. I kept a polite five paces in the rear and talked with myself about the scenery. My, but she was mad!"

"Well, I never!" said his brother. "Who'd have thought it; Billy, of all persons! I told you it couldn't be true about her even temper!"

The effect of this was spoiled by the entrance of Billy herself in fresh apparel, laughing, sparkling, waving a friendly hand across the dining room to Frank.

"And you have on diffirent clothes, too!" Frank's sister cried at him in sudden illumination. "I'll warrant you tipped over, and that's why you walked home, because it was too far to paddle in wet clothes! Didn't you?"

"You've guessed it," Frank admitted, sadly. "She simply shrieked with joy when she got tipped into three feet of water and a foot of mud. She was the funniest I ever saw! Still it may have been because of a sweet disposition. These humorous persons are likely to be short-tempered. But she certainly is pretty!"

Finally They Learned the Secret

Everybody was electrified when Abner Sawmark came up to visit Billy's family, and she lost her temper with him because he said the tip of her nose was sunburned. She exploded like a skyrocket, ended by declaring that she hated him and walked away, leaving him stranded alone before twenty persons.

"Now, why did she do that?" the Smith boys chorused in amazed awe to their sister. "Such a little thing—and she never got mad at us?"

"Because," said their sister, "she is in love with Abner Sawmark and doesn't care two pennies about either of you! You weren't worth getting mad at!"

"There may be something in that," said Bert with a sigh, after a thoughtful silence. "If they haven't any temper they don't like you, Frank. That's all it means!"

"Anyhow, she's awfully pretty!" sighed Frank, regretfully.

MOST COSTLY COAT IN THE WORLD

Cost $25,000 and Is Made of 110 Russian Sable Skins

IT is claimed that the coat which Miss Anna Held is wearing in this photograph is the most exquisite fur coat that has ever been made. It cost the actress $25,000. A hundred and ten Russian sables went to the making of it, and they were selected from over a thousand skins. Miss Held, it is said, declares that she cannot tell just why she bought it. Her words, so report has it, were: "I was simply crazy for it, but I really don't know why I bought it. I have never had occasion to wear it. About the only place one could use it would be in an open carriage. It is too expensive for an automobile." The coat is in the kimono style, and fastens on the shoulder with a hook. At the neck, in place of a collar, there is a scarf of four sable skins lined with ermine, four tails on one end and three tails and a head on the other.

THE MORAL IS—BUY REAL ESTATE, BUT SEE IT FIRST

How He Worked His Game

He Had Good Judgment, and Had Sized Up the Doctor

By KENNETT HARRIS

"THE doctor is engaged with a patient just now, but I think he'll be through in a minute or two, if you'll please to take a seat," said the young woman with the black eyes and the exuberant pompadour.

The shabby man with the diffident manner retreated to the settee and blinked at the rather sparse furniture of the little reception room.

In a moment or two a door opened and the practitioner appeared with his hand on the shoulder of his patient, an elderly man with a fine gray beard and a prosperous appearance. The practitioner was bearded, too, but his beard was brown and trimmed to a professional point. If he was not prosperous the diamond gleaming on his large white hand and the pearl in his black cravat must have been less genuine than they seemed.

"There, there!" he said. "I'm sure I'm very glad to have been of service. Good day, good day. Don't say another word about it. I haven't done any more than I told you I would do."

"I beg your pardon, doctor," said the elderly patient. "You said you thought you could cure me and you have cured me. That's more. I'd have been grateful if you had just done something to relieve me. No other physician was ever able to do that, and I've spent thousands doctoring with them; but when you make a well man of me and——"

Wouldn't Take an Excess Fee

"I tell you that I won't hear another word," said the practitioner, good-humoredly. "Excuse me, but this gentleman has been waiting to see me, I think. Good day." He gave his patient a farewell pat and beckoned to the shabby man, who shuffled into the office.

"Take a seat, sir," said the practitioner.

The shabby man obeyed, but at that moment there was a rap at the door and the elderly patient re-entered.

"I beg your pardon, doctor, and I hope this gentleman will excuse me," he said, "but I really must insist on your taking this check. Any other physician would have charged me ten times as much if he had done what you've done for me, and I wouldn't have complained. A man like you is a blessing to humanity."

The practitioner took the slip of blue paper that the elderly man handed to him and deliberately tore it into pieces. "I don't care what other physicians would have done," he said. "I certainly won't take a cent more than the regular fee. I've treated you only as I treat everybody. That's all there is about it."

"Well, if you won't you won't," said the elderly man, with a disappointed air. "I mustn't take up any more of your time."

He shook hands effusively with the practitioner and departed. His benefactor turned once more to the shabby man.

An Unusual Case to Handle

"What seems to be the trouble?" he asked.

The shabby man blinked at him. "You cure fits, don't you?" he asked.

"I do," said the practitioner, with smiling confidence. "I'd like to have you show me a case of fits that I can't cure. That gentleman who just went out was a martyr to fits for twenty years and his physicians gave him up. Told him he was incurable. He came to me a month ago and—well, you heard what he said. I have hundreds of cases like that. What kind of fits do you have?"

"Fits of depression," said the shabby man, seriously, blinking his eyes. "I've got on a bad one now."

The practitioner cleared his throat impressively.

"Hm-m!" he said. "Melancholia. I see. Yes. Well, I think you have come to the right place to get rid of that. What other symptoms have you?"

"It ain't that kind of depression," said the shabby man. "It's what's known as a financial depression. The symptoms are a morbid shrinking of the pocket-book followed by depletion, which leads to what most people would consider an abnormal appetite and thirst, in combination with insomnia, which is aggravated by the park police."

The practitioner rose from his seat and his pleasant expression vanished.

"See here——" he began.

"Keep your seat, doc," said the shabby man, easily. "I want to get my fit cured. I've been looking all day for a blessing to humanity that was willing to undertake the job, but they're scarce around this man's town. What do you think I've been doing to get a little relief? I've been peddling collar buttons. See here."

One Ten-Spot an Ample Cure

He produced a card from his breast pocket.

"Well, I don't want any collar buttons," said the practitioner. "Now, you get out before I kick you out."

"I know you don't want any collar buttons," said the shabby man. "Those collar buttons wouldn't be good enough for you. I did come in here thinking that I'd extract a dime from you if I had luck, on the strength of 'em, but that wouldn't have been no more than a relief and it's a cure that I'm after now. I think just one little ten-spot would do the trick.

"You see, old Sam used to be a partner of mine in Omaha five years ago. I guess he didn't know me, but he was the best capper I ever had, and I spotted him the minute he came out. Good work, Doc. I could almost see him spending thousands to get his fits cured. I'd have cashed his check for him, too, if I'd had the currency and wasn't well acquainted with him. Well, I'm always getting on to some new graft. Live and learn. Say, will you undertake my case? Speak up, because I'll have to try somebody else if you don't."

The practitioner looked into his blinking eyes for a moment.

Guaranteed to Be Permanent

"Would it be permanent, or do you think you'd have a relapse?" he was asked.

"Ask Sam," replied the shabby man. "I'm no hog. Ten dollars will put me on Easy street. I'd tap you for more, but I've got good judgment and I figure quick. There won't be any relapse."

The practitioner took a bill from his pocketbook and handed it to the shabby man, who pocketed it and opened the door. There, however, he checked himself.

"Doctor," he said loudly, "I wish I could express my gratitude. I'd given up hopes of a cure before I came to you."

"That's all right," said the doctor heartily. "Don't say another word about it." With which he slapped the shabby man on the back and beckoned to the new patient waiting outside.

STUFFED ONIONS

ARRANGE six or eight large Bermuda onions, peeled and washed, in a baking dish, cover with boiling water, slightly salted, and let cook for half an hour or until a wire will pierce them easily. Turn off water, and with a sharp, thin blade take out heart of each onion without breaking the outer wall. Fill the cavity with minced cold chicken and fine crumbs, seasoned with melted butter; sprinkle buttered crumbs over the dish until it almost touches the top of the onions; cover and bake half an hour.

Helps for Busy Housewives

If porcelain vessels are placed directly over the gas flame they will clean much better by rubbing lard over the outside of the pan before putting it over the flame.

In preserving pears cut them in half, but do not remove seeds, as they are much better flavored; the seeds can be removed before serving. Also when canning peaches, boil some of the pits in the syrup, and put about two pits in each quart jar.

In making fruit jelly only half cover the fruit with water; you then get the full flavor of the fruit. After straining boil the juice twenty minutes, then add sugar and boil five minutes more.

To can blueberries for pies, use no sugar, and only just a little water in your kettle to keep from burning. Boil up in their own juice, then can in the usual way.

In some place hang a stout twine across the side wall for newspapers for papa.

For cleaning babies' bottles, tea bottles or bottles of any kind nothing is so good as a piece of small chain. I use an old watch chain. Put it in the bottle with good soapy water and shake thoroughly, rinse with cold water and see how the glass will shine.

When and How to Eat

THE normal sense of hunger makes the plainest food tasty and delicious. Without hunger—that is, without the call of nature for food, one is not justified in eating, says a celebrated physician. It is under a condition of repletion and surfeiting that artificial hunger must be created by taking various condiments, spices, rich sauces and savories, and stimulating articles. All of these are unwholesome, and none of them should be resorted to except in sickness and disease, when it is often desirable and necessary to make the food as attractive and appetizing as possible to induce the patient to take it. But even in such cases it is rarely necessary to resort to unwholesome stimulation. A large part of the sickness and disease of this life would disappear if every one made it a rule to eat only when really hungry, and then to take no more than the body required.

THE WARRENS OF VIRGINIA

A Novel from the Romantic Belasco Production of the Play by William C. De Mille . . . .

CHAPTER XIX.

"You're Kissing Me—Is That War?"

At Agatha's call, Burton stepped out into the big room and faced the girl and General Warren, Mrs. Warren and Arthur.

"Sir!" cried old Warren, lifting his hand threateningly.

"Keep cool, dad," said the girl breathlessly. "We are going to talk it out."

Arthur Warren rushed at his old chum. "Come out, you coward," he said stammering in his rage, "come out and fight me. You've tricked us—ruined us. You've played my sister in your dirty game!"

"Arthur Burton is a prisoner of war," said old Warren as calmly as he could.

"Give him a chance, dad,' pleaded the girl. "Lieutenant Burton, we are in great trouble. You'll set us right."

Burton walked forward, his face a blank of hopelessness.

"Lieutenant Burton," said General Warren, his fine old dignity regained, "you were our guest. Is it true this was a trick? Was it true that you came here to have those dispatches taken, or is it possible that I am doing you an injustice, sir?"

"Burton said nothing.

"Of course, you didn't know those orders were false, did you, Ned?' said the girl with organized earnestness.

Burton still presented only a blank face.

"Your answer, daughter, is in his face," said old Warren bitterly. "Of course he knew it."

"I knew it," said Burton stolidly.

"Yes," said the girl, stanchly, "but you were just stopping here to see me, and were going on to —er—to be captured somewhere else, weren't you? You didn't mean to use us—me—to make us believe those orders, did you? Of course, you were going somewhere else."

"You Coward!"

Her arms were out toward Burton. Frankly she was pleading with him to give the answer she wanted to hear.

"Agatha, dear," protested Mrs. Warren.

"Let him answer," said the general.

"No," said Burton, distinctly.

Agatha, sobbing, fell back into her father's arms. Tenderly the old man led the girl to a chair. Her mother bent over her.

"You coward," said young Warren, white with fury.

"Arthur, your place is with the boys to the end," said his father.

The young man saluted and withdrew. The old man looked at Burton with quiet ferocity.

"And you used my daughter to carry out yo' schemes? You dared to use yo' courtship of a Southern gentleman's daughter?"

"As a soldier, I had no choice," said Burton.

"You understand, young man," said Warren, slowly, "this is not a question for court-martial. General orders have been issued to put an end to tricks like this."

"Yes, sir; I know that."

An orderly appeared at the door.

"Shall I wake General Lee, sir?"

Warren's calmness was broken on the instant. A great sob came from his throat. He staggered.

"No," he said, "I'll wake General Lee. I'll wake him. Oh, God, I'll wake him with the best news he has heard for a year.'"

Slowly he drew himself erect. "God's will be done," he ended, and stumbled out of the room.

"Oh, my dear John," said Mrs. Warren, and would have followed, but turned to go back to Agatha.

"Mrs. Warren," said Burton, softly.

She turned toward him. The quietness of great suffering was in her tones.

"Husband, son—and daughter," she said, slowly. "Sir, your hand has struck them all. You saw my boy, Arthur, go out to his death and you never tried to save him."

And in measure with her speech, Mrs. Warren slowly left the room.

Ned looked at Agatha.

"Haven't you anything to say to me?" he faltered.

"I've got mighty little to say to you, I reckon," said the girl colorlessly.

"I came here to——" he began.

"You came here to do this. Yes, and you did it."

"War makes a man do things he wouldn't think of in——"

"I suppose so. Po' old Dad. I suppose that's war, too. And Arthur—and Arthur—you sent him to his death."

Her hands covered her face at the vision that was conjured. "I suppose that's war, too."

Is That War?

Suddenly she arose and glared at him.

"But yo' kissing me! Is that wa'?" she cried. "I can understand yo' killin' all those men off there in the woods easier than I can that. Did any one order you to kiss me? Did they all know about me? Was I part of your plans? Did any one tell you, 'Go and make a fool of that girl?' Or did I just happen to fit in yo' plans after yo' got here?

"Oh, I did it! I know I did!" she cried, waving away his reply. "Of co'se you didn't ask to kiss me, or to hold me in yo' arms. I asked. I asked; and that engagement—O, you knew, you knew that I could never look at you, and yet you——"

Ned answered simply:

"There's no excuse for that, except that I——, No, there's no excuse. To obey is about the only honor a soldier knows. If I could only have a word of forgiveness. Haven't I had about enough, anyway? I've sacrificed everything."

"Yes, suh! You have! That's just it. You have sacrificed everything on earth that belongs to me. You've taken my happiness, my pride, even my—my pity—my affection, and my whole family. You've taken all these things, and—ugh! wrapped 'em up like you would wrap a bundle, tied 'em around with a string and presented them to your country.

"You call it a 'soldier's honor.' Well, I've been taught an honor above this. It seems to me yo' honor's elastic—the kind yo' can buy by the yawd!"

"You know I'd rather had died than come over to do this."

"Why didn't you then?" she called to him furiously. "I reckon you've done something no honorable man should do and live. You used a woman——"

"I'm not going to live," said Burton quickly, almost gladly, since it must make her see that all he had done was in the cause which he was enlisted to serve.

"I'm mighty glad to hear it," said the girl, and there was a marked softening of her tone.

"No matter what you think of me now, as a soldier's daughter, you can understand I had no choice," he continued.

"No, sir; I can't understand it," she answered, anger rekindled, "because yo' kind don't grow down here. Can you see my father treading on a woman? He'd rather have the whole country beaten. Why, if the men out there——" She waved her hands toward the camps beyond—"knew all that you've done, they wouldn't wait to shoot you. I reckon we all don't make such a—a business—of war as to use a woman. And you used me—me, a woman—to ——"

Here Agatha sobbed outright.

"What I can't get over is those kisses! For fo' years I—I just been dreaming and thinking of you and—Lieutenant Burton, did your officers order you to kiss me? Ugh! Couldn't you have given me a hint that it wasn't yo' time for kissin'?

"You say you are going to die! Well, dyin' seems tola'bly easy to me. You can forget it then. But how about me? I've got the rest of my life to remember it.

She looked at him in a daze.

"I've got a lover to remember, haven't I? I've got the rest of my life to remember it in, and I've got to remember my mother's blessing over us—her good soft hands in my hair. I can feel them wet. My mother's tears. Oh, my God! It's all something that can only happen to a girl once in a lifetime. And all the time you were watching the clock."

"Did You Love Me?"

Her hands fell to her side. She stared squarely at him.

"What I want to find out is, did you love me when you came here? Did you love me when you kissed me? You've got the supply train; you've ruined the family. Now, tell me, did you kiss me because you loved me? Or did you kiss me watching the clock?"

"Why, I loved you, of course," cried Burton, his face scarlet under the arraignment he was enduring.

"How could I tell? Everything else about you is false," demanded the girl. "How could I tell that your kisses weren't false? Living or dead, you've got those kisses to account to me for. You've held me in your arms!" Her sobs came again. "And all the time you were watching the clock! Oh, I'm ashamed! I'm ashamed!"

Blunderingly, confusedly, Burton tried to speak for himself.

"Agatha, if my name can ever be mentioned in this family, think of me as a—well, a soldier who did his work, repugnant as it was, but who at heart was not a dastard, although he did a dastardly thing."

He was interrupted by a calls of buglers assembling the army for retreat.

"A soldier who loved you," said Burton gravely, "who loved you and never for a moment any other woman, who loved all your pretty ways and high ideals. Everything about you I love," he concluded tremblingly.

The calls of the bugles were continuing. The sounds of galloping horses and the tramp of feet came with a dull insistence to their ears. Lee's army was in full retreat.

CHAPTER XX.

The Strongest Tie

Agatha, with sudden resolve, brought from the bosom of her dress the pass her father had written for Burton the night before.

"Heah! I've got a pass for you—through our lines. Dad gave it to me before he knew. You expected to die for this. There wasn't any other way out. I know now—you took those kisses knowing they were the last you would ever get—yo' dyin' kisses.

"Yes—that wasn't a trick. That's why I'm giving you the pass. And just for that—because I think perhaps you thought you loved me. You might get through before they all know who did this! Better hurry——"

She paused at a renewal of the calling of the bugles.

"Does this mean—is there any chance that you'll forgive?" pleaded Burton.

"Lieutenant Burton," she answered with a quiet smile. "I'm givin' you your life, as I would give a dog his life. Take it, and go as quickly as you can. I'm seein' yo' face, I hope, for the last time."

She would have gone there, but Ned stopped her.

"Agatha, you can't forgive me, then?" he pleaded. "Say that you forgive me. That, and I'll———"

Agatha threw back the heavy golden hair from her forehead. She regarded Burton with steadily flaming eyes.

"No, sir; no, sir! You hear those boys passing out there? It's retreat again, I suppose—retreat because they'd starve if they stayed here. Lots of them have fought their last fight, hungry and famished.

"You give me back the bread you took from them to-night through me, then I'll forgive you!" she cried. "Look out here. See the ragged boys, half asleep as they ride! You give me back the hope they had in their hearts when they came here! You lift my old dad's head again and make my mother happy once more and make Arthur proud to take you by the hand; And the men—the men—who died tonight.

CHAPTER XXI.

The New Era

Sapho nearly dropped to her knees in surprise. She scanned the heavily built stranger with gray, sandy beard, and the cool linen suit and big Panama hat. And then as she leaned against the trellis work in the blooming rose garden in front of the Warren house, she muttered:

"Lawsy! Lawsy! The Yankee soldier!"

Old Jim Griffin faced her with a kindly smile. Five years had gone. Lee had surrendered. The Confederate flag had been lowered for all time. Painfully, slowly, the South was readjusting itself to meet the new conditions. But Poverty still stalked in the wake of war.

"Tell General Warren that General Griffin would like to see him—that I was just passing through and couldn't resist the temptation to come and shake his hand."

"Yes, sah."

"Just a minute, Sapho. How is everything down this way? It's been a long time since——"

"Well, you can see, sah. We are all free."

"You ought to be glad of that."

"Oh, yes, sah. But what beats me is that since I'se free and don't belong to de Warren family no mo', dat no 'count Jones nigger is jess as good as I am. Yes, sah, But yo' can see fo' yo'self, sah, 'bout de Warren family. Look over dar. De carriage house is empty."

Griffin nodded.

"Ebery one of de family has to wuk now. Bob and Bet's grown up considerable."

"The young lady?" ventured Griffin.

"Miss Aggie? Her hands des hold up de home, sah. Yes, dat's what dey does."

Friendly Interest

"Has she any—any beaux?"

Sapho frowned.

"I only ask in friendly interest," said Griffin.

"Oh, yes, sah. She got 'em, but she got no time fo' beaux. She des plans fo' de family."

"Does she ever speak," asked Griffin with an assumption of unconcern, "of that young man—you remember—Burton?"

"No, sah. No one does—not in dis family. If de General hadn't been a gentleman he'd neber told him de war was over dat mornin' and' released him like he did. He'd shot him fust and released him afterward. Dat's what everyone says in dis county. No, sah! De General——"

"How is the General?"

"He's des de same. He sayin' now he's 'gaged in agercultural pursuits. Yes, sah."

"What do you mean?"

"Plowin', des plowin'; calls it agercultural pursuits."

"Dear me," said Griffin in genuine concern. "I feared something of that sort. I'm sorry to know the General is obliged to—to——"

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

JEFF KILLS BEAR WITH A PUNCH

BY TAD.

Jim Jeffries has broken into the fighting game again, and has started his new record by killing a big grizzly bear with one punch.

The ex-champion went bear hunting the other day in the mountains north of Los Angeles, and all he brought back was a wildcat and a bear. Other members of the party came back pretty well loaded, but Jeff explained himself by saying that he broke his gun on the first day, and, not having another with him, was forced to take one of so small a calibre that it was useless against bears.

The last day of the hunt the big fellow went forth with nothing but a pair of brass knuckles in his hunting coat. The very first crack out of the box he came face to face with a bear. He picked up a rock at first and soaked Mr. Bruin, and then the latter made a rush at the ex-champion that made him either a mark or a winner.

As he says it himself it sounds better:

"When I stood up in front of the old boy boy it made me feel as though I had gone back into the fight game again," said Jeff, as an introduction to the "bear story" that was to come. "He growled and showed his teeth, and I felt like doing the same thing. I was that full of fight. I slipped the 'knucks' out of my hunting coat pocket and walked over toward Mr. Bear. He seemed to join in the spirit of the thing, for he reared up on his hind legs just as though he had heard the referee call time.

"I feinted with my left and the bear made a swipe at me with his right paw. This is going to be like grabbing money from home, I figured, as I tried the same trick again. Sure enough, the old boy parried with his right mitt, and then I hooked in my old right fist to the chin and he dropped in a heap. The brass works had done the job up right, for when I reached over to feel his pulse, I found that he was dead as a mackerel."

"Mike Twin" Sullivan, who is the press agent of the Sullivan family, writes that either he or his brother will go to New York for a consideration and clean the dump up. Anything from welterweight to heavies will do, and the first come the first served. This is the letter:

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 28, 1908.

Friend Tad—I thought I would drop you a line to see if I could place brother Jack with the winner of the McCoy-Stewart bout. If the Kid does not want to box him, Jack will meet O'Brien, Kaufman or any middle or heavy weight they can secure. He is still on the coast trying to get a match with Papke, but it looks as if Bill will not box him unless he does 154 pounds, which is too low for Jack.

Jimmie Gardner and myself ought to put up a slashing bout, as Gardner is considered the fastest six-round man in the business, and I would like to box him before one o fthe leading New York clubs. If I don't sign up shortly in the East I will take to the West.

Hoping you will give this space, I remain, your sincere friend,

"MIKE TWIN" SULLIVAN,
Welterweight Champion.

Joe Woodman, manager of Sam Langford, sends us the following, which is quite a slap at our old pal Jawn:

Boston, Sept. 30, 1908.

My Dear Tad—Kindly announce to the dancing master from Philadelphia that before Sam Langford will enter into any match with him he must post the sum of $1,000 with either James H. Stack of the Knickerbocker Hotel or Patrick Roche as a guarantee of his sincerity, the said money to be turned over to any charity named by the New York newspaper men in the event of the chosen referee seeing fit to disqualify him. Sincerely yours,

J. A. WOODMAN,
Manager of Sam Langford.

P. S.—Please publish the above, and I trust you will do so prominently, as it will aid considerably in determining whether or not O'Brien is advertising himself at Sam Langford's expense.

BRADLEY SLEPT ON.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—Third Baseman Bradley was awakened by police, who informed him that a window had been smashed at Carr & Bradley's sporting goods establishment, No. 724 Prospect. "You'll have to look after it yourself," said Bradley. "I play ball to-morrow, and I must have my sleep." Bill slept.

GAMES TO-DAY.

There was no material change in the standing of the flag race in either league as a result of yesterday's games, though the Giants were pulled down considerably, because the Phillies took one of the games in the doubleheader and the Cubs and Pirates are only two points away, which leaves considerable doubt as to the final outcome, and there is a chance of a tie occurring when all the games are played in the national organization.

These two final games between the Giants and the Phillies will have an important bearing on the pennant race, as well as the three games to come with the Doves.

The Cubs will line up again with the Reds in Cincinnati while the Pirates should improve their standing as they play two games with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Western clubs in the American League had an open date yesterday, but they tackle each other this afternoon and the result of the games will have a direct bearing on the final result. The White Sox have a chance to pull down the Naps' lead, as they face them, while Detroit and the St. Louis Browns get together in the final series.

The Browns expect to knock the Tigers down with the left-hand twirlers who have been the bete noire to the champions.

The tussle between Cleveland and the White Sox will hold the entire interest of the West as well as the East.

CZARVENA'S RECORD.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 2.—Czarvena won the Horse Review Futurity purse for two-year-olds. She trotted the second mile 2:15¼, in spite of a bothersome wind. This time is the best this year for a two-year-old trotter. The Eel tried free-for-all pacing and was in front at each of three finishes.

POWERS SAYS GIANTS SHOULD HAVE THE GAME

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—P. T. Powers, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues and president of the Eastern League, yesterday sent a communication to President John T. Brush of the New York club. Powers declares he would decide the disputed game of September 23 in favor of the Giants and gives his reasons. Following is the letter:

Mr. John T. Brush, President New York Baseball Club:

Dear Sir—Replying to your favor of Sept. 25, regarding your request for my opinion upon the disputed game between the New York and Chicago clubs, will state: If the case had come up before me for a decision I would have decided instantly that the game rightfully belonged to the New York club, regardless of the later report of the umpires. My reasons for so deciding would be because of the fact that the player scoring the winning run was on third base when a clean base hit was made and the batsman making the same reached first base safely.

As I understand baseball there has been an unwritten law that when a winning run is scored as above the game shall end and no attention is paid to the other base runners. In ninety-nine times out of one hundred they hesitate between the bases, watching to see if the run is safely scored, and then start for the club house to avoid the crowd. No objection to that has ever been called, to my knowledge, to the attention of a league official heretofore, and it is unreasonable and unfair to suppose that when an ordinary safe base hit is made that it is possible to throw a runner out who is approaching any of the other bases. Therefore, I claim it is unfair and unjust to deprive the New York club of its honest and well-earned victory in this case. Furthermore, at this stage of the championship race the changing of the result of the game on a technical point or play should not be considered.

Owing to my friendly relations with the Chicago and Pittsburg clubs I have heretofore refused to express an opinion to the newspaper men who desired me to do so, and hoped to keep out of the controversy, knowing that the National League Board of Directors are fair sportsmen and would render an impartial and just decision along these lines.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) P. T. POWERS.

The battle between the friends of Cy Young and Amby McConnell of the Red Sox is very close for the cup to be given the most popular professional ball-player, while the supporters of Cardio and Curley are making a keen race for the amateur cup.

FAMOUS ENDURANCE RUN IS AT LAST CALLED OFF

By J. C. KERRISON.

What seemed to be the only possible solution of the twenty-four-hour endurance contest of the Bay State Automobile Association was reached last evening when the representatives of the three cars—Shawmut, Franklin and Studebaker—notified the committee that they withdrew in a body. They were satisfied that under the conditions imposed by the committee and the condition in which their several cars were that the run might continue until midwinter before a conclusion was reached by the elimination of any one of them.

Of course there was nothing for the committee to do save accept the withdrawal of the three contestants. In doing so the officers made the statement that they considered this as the most satisfactory conclusion. The committee had endeavored in every legal way possible to bring about an elimination of one car or the other and had failed. It felt that the cars had withstood the hard usage of the several trips in a manner that proved conclusively that they were built of the best material and by the best of workmen.

During the progress of the run the cars have travelled 1604 miles under absolutely abnormal conditions, and the work had given to Boston the greatest endurance contest known in the world. Its duplicate has yet to be seen. No other city in the country or in the world has produced so long drawn out and evenly fought contest as this has proven. The committee felt that all honor and credit was due to each of these three cars, and stated that it would award perfect score certificates to each of the cars.

The gentlemen representing the cars, Messrs. Waite, Hanley and Daniels respectively, stated that they would in a day or two suggest the final disposition of the cup offered by a member for the car winning the contest, and the suggestion will be forwarded to the donor in due season.

This conclusion was reached after the cars had finished their day's work, all having returned to Boston with perfect scores. Yesterday morning the cars were started for Intervale, via Portland and Poland Springs, but at Portland were ordered back to Boston for the night at the request of their entrants. The run both ways was made in perfect order and in good time, and it took but a few minutes after their arrival here for the gentlemen interested to inform the committee of their determination.

In conclusion the committee, consisting of J. C. Kerrison, V. A. Charles, E. A. Gilmore and Colonel Horace G. Kemp, is well pleased with the results of its endeavors. These speak for themselves. They desire to express their appreciation of the manner in which the contestants recognized and obeyed the rules, their endeavors being at all times to assist rather than retard the committee, and it can truly be said that no such run as this was ever held with less friction than was experienced during the past ten days.

TAILORS' CLEARING HOUSE.

DON'T BE A READY-MADE MAN

GEORGE'S, 14 Summer St., BOSTON. GEORGE'S, 259 W. 34th St., NEW YORK. GEORGE'S, 101 S. 15th St., PHILA., PA.

Our Values Are So Remarkable That Many Who Don't Investigate Will Not Believe Them.

Our offers of $15, $18, $20, $25, $30 and $35 for suits, medium and heavy weight overcoats, cravenettes, full dress and Tuxedo suits, which were custom made for $35, $45, $50, $60, $75 up to $100, are so remarkable that we realize that many who do not understand our system are skeptical. We wish we could bring here every skeptic and get him to carefully examine the class of garments we offer. We want every snappy dresser to come and if he is in the habit of paying high prices to the tailor he is especially welcome. Men who know quality are convinced at a glance. Here are two sample offers: Sack suit, very dark brown with black shadow stripe, coat conservative 3-button model, custom made by a Broadway, N. Y., tailor for $45, our price $15. Medium weight overcoat, dark gray, the shade known as London smoke, full box back, broad shoulder effect, custom made for $60 by a 5th ave., N. Y., tailor, our price $20. Over 2,000 other garments to select from. GEORGE'S TAILOR PARLORS, 14 Summer street, near Washington. Open Saturday night. Established 1879, and originators of the sale of merchant tailors' misfit and uncalled-for garments.

Letter Postage to Europe Reduced to Two Cents

Think About This, and About Government and Municipal Ownership at the Same Time

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Readers, yesterday by agreement between the governments of Great Britain and of this country, the rate of postage between the United States and Great Britain was reduced from five cents to two cents.

From the extreme northwest point in Alaska to the extreme northeast point in Scotland, a man can NOW write to another for two cents. Voluntarily the management of postoffices in the two nations have cut three-fifths, 60 per cent., from the amount charged the public for letter service across the Atlantic Ocean.

That is because the postoffice is under government ownership.

Do you find anybody in the line of private ownership acting in this strange and unusual way?

Are not the railroads demanding a right to raise their charges for freight, AND REDUCE THE PAY OF THEIR MEN, AS A NICE, SIMPLE SOLUTION OF THEIR FINANCIAL TROUBLES?

Have not the telegraph companies, OWNED BY PRIVATE INDIVIDUALS, combined very recently to raise rates all over the United States?

Are not the individuals that own the street railways of our big cities adding constantly tens of millions and hundreds of millions of watered stock to their concerns and compelling the people to pay on those watered stocks?

Have they not refused transfers in New York City? Are they not constantly seeking means of overworking and underpaying their employes?

Readers, do you not think it would be a good thing to keep your minds FIXED upon the questions of government and of municipal ownership of national properties, OF PUBLIC MONOPOLIES AND NECESSITIES?

Could there be a greater object-lesson than this voluntary and enormous reduction of 60 per cent. in the cost of transatlantic mail charge, under government ownership, and the constant increase of all commodities and charges under private ownership?

Think about it; it is worth your thought.

Our Greatest School Is That of Work

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is now at work in a New England carpet factory. It will be the young man's first job. And his father is wise in putting the young man to work.

There is nothing like good, hard, earnest work to develop character. While no sensible person will seriously decry university training, nevertheless there is an element in actual and downright performance that no school can confer.

The American nation is one of workers. And true work means achievement. To succeed, the worker must create something, or improve a system, or better the methods of his predecessors.

By that token the quality of American performance is not only maintained but kept ahead of the rest of the world. Therefore, the true American is a worker—a person who adds to the resources of the nation.

Useful work is one of the best things in the world. It is conducive of virility and virtue. The workers are the producers of our great new inventions and the creators of our national wealth. And to work usefully amounts to a liberal education.

The worker or producer realizes the great basic fact of modern civilization, which is that behind all the powers of the world to-day are the invention and production of things making life pleasanter and providing occupation for the increasing millions.

The average person to-day consumes and requires vastly more than his predecessor of the previous generation. And the progress of the race can be traced back from generation to generation by the progress of intelligent work.

Therein is American supremacy. Intelligent work! The old idea was that work was drudgery. The new idea is that it is both a science and a means of discovery. The worker works to create new things of benefit to art and comfort. He can be an artist. He can be humanitarian. He can be a public benefactor.

America has more schools than any one person could name. But its greatest school is the School of Work.

The Frying Pan or the Fire

Getting a Divorce Is One Thing That Should Be Well Considered Before Action Is Taken

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

DIVORCE has become such an everyday affair that men and women speak of it as a loophole from the commonest ills of marital life in these days. Where once a woman would have shown indignation at the mere mention of divorce as a possibility for any friend of hers, she now talks of it as an incident liable to occur in her own career.

It has come to be regarded very much in the light of a trip to Europe, and is frequently the sequel to one, where the wife has taken the voyage alone.

Meanwhile there are real ills and real tragedies for which separation or divorce is the only cure.

But before you resort to divorce, my dear madam, would it not be wise to think the whole subject over in detail?

Scores, yes hundreds, of wives will read these words who have ceased to love their husbands, and who have become entangled in the silver web of "sympathetic friendship" or the golden net of "affinity."

Think Before You Act

You, perhaps, are this moment thinking how happy you could be were you free to marry the man who has shown you such kindness and delicate regard during your unhappy time of marital disillusionment.

Your husband has been untrue to you, or he has been unkind, or you have drifted apart through various causes. All the romance of life has vanished and you feel that to go on indefinitely in your present situation will be insupportable.

The visits or letters of the "sympathetic friend" are the only bright spots in your dull and dreary days, and you believe a life passed with him would be one of unalloyed delight.

Now, in order to enjoy that life you must pass through the divorce court. Have you realized all that that means? And do you know the man who has infatuated you well enough to be certain of the position he will take in the matter?

Will He Stand the Test?

There are scores of men who are adorable lovers of women who are not objects of public scandal, but who possess no qualities of the moral hero, and who shrink from the shot and shell of scornful words and glances as a timid soldier shrinks from the fire of the enemy.

So long as a woman is received and accepted by society such men do not mind having their names associated with hers gallantly, and even take a pride in posing as her friend and champion. But when she is dropped by Mme. Grundy, and when the newspapers feature her domestic troubles, these men find a sudden journey to foreign lands necessary for their health.

Is your friend one of these? Even if he is not, are you sure he possesses character and independence enough to be happy with you when both are coldly received among old friends, or when your advent into a hotel or theatre excites unpleasant attention?

Men are extremely sensitive to public opinion. They care more for the respect of the outside world than women do. They feel the slights of club and business associates, and in spite of their reasoning powers, which are supposed to be greater than woman's, they frequently blame the woman who has been the cause of their unenviable position in these matters.

Frying Pan or Fire

Before you give up your present misfortunes for another man's love think carefully of all these facts regarding the ways of a man's mind. The frying pan may be a most unpleasant dwelling place, but the fire has never proven a better one. Be quite sure you are to leap into fresh air and on a sound platform before you jump.

I believe in separation for wretched married people. I believe in divorce for the people who have substituted hate for love. I have known a woman to be ideally happy with a good man after leaving a disappointed and faithless brute.

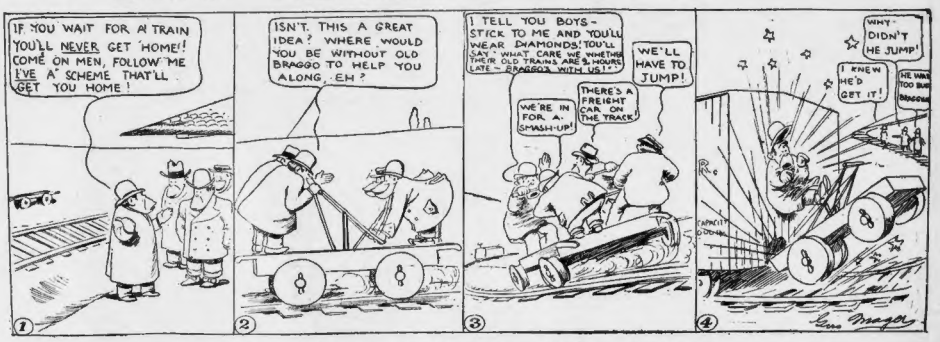

But I have also known a number of unhappy wives to follow one unhappy marriage with a second, and to find the joy and peace they expected existed only in imagination.

I have known a divorced woman to become utterly disillusioned with the man for whom she gave up the world's high esteem. And when a woman reaches that experience she becomes a jest to gods and men. Nothing can ever restore the dignity of true womanhood to her again.

Better be unhappy than ridiculous.

The Pile of Crooked Gold

By James J. Montague

THERE'S a crooked little fellow with a pile of crooked gold,
Who runs a crooked business where men's souls are bought and sold,
And with his evil-glinting eyes, and mouth set hard and grim,
He waits for men with souls to sell to come and deal with him;
Nor waits in vain, for high and low, from Senate and from slum,
They bear the clinking of the gold, and stealthily they come.

THE Politician sells his friends, beside that shining heap;
The Senator his country, and he sells it mighty cheap;
The Lawyer sells his honesty, and hastens forth to say
The truth about that pile of gold, and turn men's wrath away;
And e'en the Teacher takes his share, and with his pockets lined
Sends learning-coated poison out to dull the public mind.

THE dirty dollars do their work, and do it swift and well;
They fortify the man who buys, and dumn the men who sell;
And still the little crooked man sits watching o'er his pile
And doles a dollar here and there, and smiles his evil smile.
But as the mischief he has done becomes well known to men
They may forget their fear of gold and all its works—and then?

Under a Two-Cent Stamp

By Wex Jones

NOW that a two-cent stamp will rode off to the club."
carry a letter across the Atlantic, what may we expect in the English mail bags?

Alfred Austin will surely not miss a mail, and at a cost of two cents will tell us in more or less metrical form how the large Mother England regards her little daughter, America.

A letter signed by Rudyard Kipling will run:

"When the rickshaw bumped over the edge of the Jungham Road, Timshaw had a curious feeling that he had been through the same experience before. It reminded him of the time Bobby Shafto had swiped the cook, that's another story. A corker, too. Tell it for fifty cents a word.

"Timshaw was a bounder, but he had human feelings, and when his head smashed against a rock he fainted.

"Snoopson-Wiffles, of the Berkshires, found him there. The Berkshires were great on finding things. Now that time they found the Jam of Nawangore and his army. But that is (as anybody can see) another story.

"The Berkshires' mess was largely composed of gentlemen. Snoopson-Wiffles, as his name indicates—he was one of the Essex Wiffles—was a gentleman. Consequently he was disgusted to find Timshaw.

"'A dashed bagman,' he muttered, and ing there but the cat."

Another letter about "the sweep and the sway and the swish and swing of it" would not be about the subway, but a few lines from Swinburne about the sea.

For two cents Marie Corelli might—but we hope won't—mail us egrets from her latest novel containing pleasing attacks on society—amorphous punching bag of the ink-bottle athletes—billiards, the church, corsets, monarchy, reviewers, publishers, muffins, critics, Americans and Hall Caine.

And for two cents Conan Doyle might send us another mutilation of the once incomparable Sherlock Holmes:

"'What have you there, Watson?' "'The records of "The Adventures of the Tickly Undershirt,"' "The Odd Case of Aaron Bookfiller" and "The Man with the Purple Eye."'

"'I hear some one coming up the stairs,' said Holmes. 'You needn't ask—I know you are going to inquire how I know the person is coming upstairs. The steps are growing nearer; therefore they are drawing nearer.'

"'Astonishing,' I murmured.

"'It is a tall man with new shoes on,' continued Holmes. 'He forgot to shave this morning and his watch is ten minutes slow. His telephone number is 8770 Park Lane and he walks with a slight sequently he was disgusted to find Timshaw.

"'I opened the door. There was noth-
